

Chapter 3

EDINBURGH AND THE LOTHIANS

3

Updated by Joseph Reaney

 Sights

★★★★★

 Restaurants

★★★★★

 Hotels

★★★★★

 Shopping

★★★★★

 Nightlife

★★★★★

WELCOME TO EDINBURGH AND THE LOTHIANS

TOP REASONS TO GO

★ Culture: From floor-stomping ceilidhs to avant-garde modern dance, the city's calendar of cultural festivals, including the remarkable Edinburgh Festival Fringe—the world's largest arts festival by a mile—is truly outstanding.

★ The Royal Mile: History plays out before your eyes in this centuries-old capital along the Royal Mile. Edinburgh Castle and the Palace of Holyroodhouse were the locations for some of the most important struggles between Scotland and England.

★ Architecture: From the Old Town's labyrinthine medieval streets to the neoclassical orderliness of the New Town to imaginative modern developments like the Scottish Parliament, the architecture of Auld Reekie spans the ages.

★ Food: The city's ever-expanding restaurant scene attracts celebrity chefs that serve up international dishes and genuine Scottish cuisine, like Cullen skink and haggis with neeps and tatties.

For all its steep roads and hidden alleyways, Edinburgh is not a difficult place to navigate. Most newcomers gravitate to two areas, the Old Town and the New Town. The former funnels down from the castle on either side of High Street, better known as the Royal Mile. Princes Street Gardens and Edinburgh Waverley station separate the oldest part of the city from the stately New Town, known for its neoclassical architecture and verdant gardens. To the north the city sweeps down to the Firth of Forth. It is here you will find the port of Leith, replete with trendy pubs and fine-dining restaurants. The southern and western neighborhoods are mainly residential, but are home to a few attractions, such as Edinburgh Zoo.

1 Old Town. The focal point of Edinburgh for centuries, the Old Town is a picturesque jumble of medieval tenements. Here are prime attractions such as Edinburgh Castle and the newer symbol of power, the Scottish Parliament. Here you will find everything from buzzing bars and nightclubs to ghostly alleyways and vaults.

2 New Town. Built in the 18th and 19th centuries to prevent the wealthier residents of overcrowded Old Town from decamping to London, the neoclassical sweep of the New Town is a masterpiece of city planning. Significant sights include the National Gallery of Scotland and Calton Hill, which offers some of the best views of the city from its summit.

3 Haymarket. West of the Old Town and south of the West End is Haymarket, a district with its own down-to-earth character and well-worn charm. It's close to Edinburgh's second train station.

4 West End. Edinburgh's commercial center has boutiques aplenty as well as the Edinburgh Zoo.

5 South Side. Mostly residential, the South Side makes a good base for budget-conscious travelers. It's where most of the city's students live.

6 Leith. On the southern shore of the Firth of Forth, Edinburgh's port of Leith is where you'll find the now-retired Royal Yacht Britannia, along with some of the city's smartest restaurants and bars.

7 West Lothian, the Forth Valley, Midlothian, and East Lothian. Known collectively as the Lothians, the areas of green countryside and seafront villages around Edinburgh are replete with historic houses, castles, museums, and world-renowned golf courses.

Edinburgh is “a city so beautiful it breaks the heart again and again,” as Alexander McCall Smith once wrote. One of the world’s stateliest cities and proudest capitals, it is—like Rome—built on seven hills, making it a striking backdrop for the ancient pageant of history.

In a skyline of sheer drama, Edinburgh Castle looks out over the city, frowning down on Princes Street’s glamour and glitz. But despite its rich past, the city’s famous festivals, excellent museums and galleries, and the modernist Scottish Parliament are all reminders that Edinburgh has its feet firmly in the 21st century.

Nearly everywhere in Edinburgh (the burgh is always pronounced burra in Scotland) are spectacular buildings, whose Doric, Ionic, and Corinthian pillars add touches of neoclassical grandeur to the largely Presbyterian backdrop. Large gardens are a strong feature of central Edinburgh, while Arthur’s Seat, a craggy peak of bright green-and-yellow furze, rears up behind the spires of the Old Town. Even as Edinburgh moves through the 21st century, its tall guardian castle remains the focal point of the city and its venerable history.

Modern Edinburgh has become a cultural capital, staging the Edinburgh International Festival and the Festival Fringe in every possible venue each August. The stunning National Museum of Scotland complements the city’s wealth of galleries and artsy hangouts. Add Edinburgh’s growing reputation for food and nightlife and you have one of the world’s most beguiling cities.

Today, Edinburgh is the second-most-important financial center in the United Kingdom, and is widely renowned for its exceptional (and ever-expanding) dining and nightlife scenes—some of the reasons it regularly ranks near the top of quality-of-life surveys.

Edinburgh’s Old Town, which bears a great symbolic weight as the “heart of Scotland’s capital,” is a boon for lovers of atmosphere and history. In contrast, if you appreciate the unique architectural heritage of the city’s Enlightenment, then the New Town’s for you. If you belong to both categories, don’t worry—the Old and New Towns are only yards apart. Explore the city’s main thoroughfares—peopled by the spirits of Mary, Queen of Scots, Sir Walter Scott, and Robert Louis Stevenson—then get lost among the tiny wynds and closes (old medieval alleys that connect the winding streets). And remember: you haven’t earned your porridge until you’ve climbed Arthur’s Seat.

Head out of the city center and you’ll find smaller communities with an abundance of charm. Dean Village, with its cobbled streets and 19th-century water mills, has a character all its own. Duddingston, just southeast of Arthur’s Seat, has all the bucolic charm of a country village. Then there’s Edinburgh’s port, Leith, home to some of Scotland’s smartest bars and restaurants. Visible beyond them all, across the Firth of Forth, is the patchwork of fields that is the county of Fife—a reminder, like the mountains to the northwest that can be glimpsed from Edinburgh’s highest points, that the rest of Scotland lies within easy reach.

Planning

When to Go

Scotland’s reliably unreliable weather means that you could visit at the height of summer and be forced to wear a winter coat. Conversely, conditions can be balmy in early spring and late autumn. You may choose to avoid the crowds (and hotel price hikes) of July and August, but you’d also miss some of the greatest festivals on Earth. May, June, and September are probably the most hassle-free months in which to visit, while still offering hope of good weather. Short days and grim conditions make winter less appealing, though there are few better New Year’s Eve celebrations than Edinburgh’s Hogmanay.

FESTIVALS

Walking around Edinburgh in late July, you’ll likely feel the first vibrations of the earthquake that is festival time, which shakes the city throughout August. You may hear reference to an “Edinburgh Festival,” but this is really an umbrella term for five separate festivals all taking place around the same time. For an overview, check out www.edinburgh-festivalcity.com.

Beltane Fire Festival

FESTIVALS | Held every year on April 30, this flame-filled Calton Hill extravaganza is inspired by an Iron Age Celtic festival, which was held to celebrate the return of summer. Expect drumbeat processions, bonfires, and fireworks, as costumed fire dancers reveal the fates of the May Queen and the Green Man. [✉ Calton Hill](mailto:Calton Hill), Calton www.beltane.org.

★ Edinburgh Festival Fringe

ARTS FESTIVALS | FAMILY | During the world’s largest arts festival in August, most of the city center becomes one huge performance area, with fire eaters, sword swallowers, unicyclists, jugglers, string quartets, jazz groups, stand-up comedians, and magicians all thronging into High Street and Princes Street. Every available performance space—church halls, community centers, parks, sports fields, nightclubs, and more—is utilized for every kind of event, with something for all tastes. There are even family-friendly shows. Many events are free; others start at a few pounds and rise to £15 or £20. There’s so much happening in the three weeks of the festival that it’s possible to arrange your own entertainment program from early morning to after midnight. ■ TIP → Be aware that hotels get booked up months in advance during the Fringe and bargains are virtually impossible to come by, so plan your trip as far in advance as possible. [✉ Edinburgh Festival Fringe Office](mailto:Edinburgh Festival Fringe Office), 180 High St., Old Town 0131/226-0026 www.edfringe.com.

Edinburgh International Book Festival

FESTIVALS | FAMILY | This two-week-long event held every August pulls together a heady mix of authors from around the world, from Nobel laureates to best-selling fiction writers, and gets them talking about their work in a magnificent tent village. There are more than 750 events in total, with the workshops for would-be writers and children proving hugely popular. [✉ Edinburgh International Book Festival Admin Office](mailto:Edinburgh International Book Festival Admin Office), 5 Charlotte Sq., New Town 0131/718-5666 www.edbookfest.co.uk.

Edinburgh International Festival

ARTS FESTIVALS | FAMILY | Running throughout August, this flagship traditional arts festival attracts international performers and audiences to a celebration of music,

The Festival Fringe started in 1947 at the same time as the International Festival, when eight companies that were not invited to perform in the latter decided to attend anyway.

dance, theater, opera, and art. Programs, tickets, and reservations are available from the Hub, set within the impressive Victorian-Gothic Tolbooth Kirk. Tickets for the festival go on sale in April, and the big events sell out within the month. Nevertheless, you'll still be able to purchase tickets for some events during the festival; prices range from around £4 to £60. ☎ The Hub, 348–350 Castlehill, Old Town ☎ 0131/473–2015 🌐 www.eif.co.uk.

Edinburgh International Film Festival

FESTIVALS | One of Europe's foremost film festivals, promoting the best of global independent cinema since 1947, this event takes place from mid-June to early July each year. It's a great place for a first screening of a new film—movies from Billy Elliot to Little Miss Sunshine to The Hurt Locker have premiered here. ☎ Edinburgh Film Festival Office, 88 Lothian Rd., West End ☎ 0131/228–4051 🌐 www.edfilmfest.org.uk.

Edinburgh International Science Festival

FESTIVALS | FAMILY | Held around Easter each year, the Edinburgh International

Science Festival is one of Europe's largest, and aims to make science accessible, interesting, and fun for kids (and adults) through an extensive program of innovative exhibitions, workshops, performances, and screenings. ☎ The Hub, 348–350 Castlehill, Old Town ☎ 0131/553–0320 🌐 www.sciencefestival.co.uk.

Edinburgh Jazz & Blues Festival

FESTIVALS | Held over a week in late July, the Edinburgh Jazz & Blues Festival attracts world-renowned musicians playing everything from blues-rock to soul music, and brings local enthusiasts out of their living rooms and into the pubs, clubs, and Spiegeltents (pop-up performance spaces) around the city. ☎ Edinburgh Jazz & Blues Festival, 89 Giles St., Leith ☎ 0131/467–5200 🌐 www.edinburghjazzfestival.com.

★ Edinburgh's Hogmanay

FESTIVALS | Nowadays most capital cities put on decent New Year's celebrations, but Edinburgh's three-day-long Hogmanay festivities are on a whole other level. There's a reason this city is famous around the world as the best place to ring in the New Year. Yes, it's winter and yes, it's chilly, but joining a crowd of 80,000 people in a monster street party, complete with big-name rock concerts, torchlight processions, ceilidh dancing, and incredible fireworks, is something you won't forget in a hurry. The headline city center events are ticketed (and can be pricey), but there are free parties happening all over the city. ☎ Princes St., Old Town 🌐 www.edinburghshogmanay.com 📄 From £20.

The Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo

FESTIVALS | It may not be art, but The Tattoo (as it's commonly known) is at the very heart of Scottish cultural life. Taking place, like many of the city's festivals, during August, this celebration of martial music features international military bands, gymnastics, and stunt motorcycle teams on the castle esplanade. Each year 22,000 seats are made available, yet it's always a sellout, so book your place early. If you are lucky enough to get tickets, dress warmly for evening shows and always bring a raincoat; the show goes on in all weathers. ☎ The Tattoo Box Office, 1–3 Cockburn St., Old Town ☎ 0131/225–1188 🌐 www.edintattoo.co.uk.

Planning Your Time

One of Edinburgh's greatest virtues is its compact size, which means that it is possible to pack a fair bit into even the briefest of visits. The two main areas of interest are the Old Town and the New Town, where you'll find Edinburgh Castle, the Scottish Parliament, Princes Street Gardens, and the National Gallery of Scotland. You can cover the major attractions in one day, but to give the major sights their due, you should allow at least two. You can also choose between the Palace of Holyroodhouse and the important museums of Edinburgh, or explore the Royal Botanic Garden and Holyrood Park. Head down to leafy, villagelike Stockbridge, then immerse yourself in the greenery along the Water of Leith, visiting the Scottish National Gallery of Modern Art along the way.

Getting out of town is also an option for longer stays. Hop on a bus out to Midlothian to see the magnificent Rosslyn Chapel (even if you're not a fan of The Da Vinci Code, it's still interesting), and Crichton Castle, parts of which date back to the 14th century. Head west along the Firth of Forth to explore South Queensferry, with its three Forth bridges (including the iconic red railway bridge) and palatial Hopetoun House, or head east for the beautiful beaches, bird-watching, and golf courses in and around North Berwick.

■ TIP → Some attractions have special hours during August, due to the large influx of festivalgoers. If you want to see something special, be sure to check the hours ahead of time.

Getting Here and Around

AIR

Edinburgh Airport is 7 miles west of the city center. Flights bound for Edinburgh depart virtually every hour from London's Gatwick, Heathrow, and City airports.

Airlines serving Edinburgh, Scotland's busiest airport, include Air France, Aer Lingus, American Airlines, British Airways, Delta Virgin, easyJet, Flybe, Iberia, Jet2, KLM, Lufthansa, and Ryanair.

Delta flies direct to Edinburgh from New York's JFK airport, while United flies direct from Newark. There are also direct flights from Boston and Washington, D.C., (Delta), Chicago (United), and Philadelphia (American). Otherwise, your airline is likely to require a change somewhere in Europe. You could also fly into Glasgow Airport, 50 miles away, or the smaller Glasgow Prestwick, another 30 miles south, but these will add about an hour and a half to your journey.

There are no rail links to the city center, so the most efficient way to do the journey on public transport is by tram; the service runs every 8 to 12 minutes and takes about half an hour. Tickets cost £6 one-way and £8.50 for a round-trip. By bus or car you can usually make it to Edinburgh in a half hour, unless you hit the morning (7:30 to 9) or evening (4 to 6) rush hours. Lothian Buses runs an Airlink express service to Waverley railway station via Haymarket that usually takes around half an hour, depending on traffic. Buses run every 10 minutes (every 30 minutes throughout the night); tickets cost £4.50 one way or £7.50 round-trip and can be purchased from the booth beside the bus. Local buses also run between Edinburgh Airport and the city center every 15 minutes or so from 9 to 5, and roughly every hour during off-peak hours; they are far cheaper—just £1.70 one-way—but can take twice as long.

You can arrange for a chauffeur-driven limousine to meet your flight at Edinburgh Airport through Transvercia Chaffeur Drive, Little's, or WL Sleigh Ltd, for upwards of £50.

Taxis are readily available outside the terminal. The trip takes 20 to 30 minutes to the city center, 15 minutes longer during rush hour. The fare is roughly £25. Note that airport taxis picking up fares from the terminal are any color, not the typical black cabs.

AIRPORT INFORMATION Edinburgh

Airport. ☎ Glasgow Rd., Ingliston
☎ 0844/448-8833 🌐 www.edinburghairport.com.

AIRPORT TRANSFER CONTACTS

Little's. ☎ 1282 Paisley Rd. W, Glasgow ☎ 0131/334-2177 🌐 www.littles.co.uk. Transvercia Chaffeur Drive. ☎ The Harland Bldg., Unit 6, Suite 19, Pilrig Heights, Leith ☎ 0131/555-0459 🌐 www.transvercia.co.uk. W L Sleigh. ☎ Unit 11A

West Craigs, Turnhouse Rd., Edinburgh
☎ 0131/339-9607 🌐 sleigh.co.uk.

BUS

National Express provides a coach service to and from London and other major towns and cities. The main terminal, Edinburgh Bus Station, is a short walk north of Edinburgh Waverley station, immediately east of St. Andrew Square. Long-distance coaches must be booked in advance online, by phone, or at the terminal. Edinburgh is approximately eight hours by bus from London.

Lothian Buses provides most of the services between Edinburgh and the Lothians and conducts day tours around and beyond the city. First Bus runs additional buses out of Edinburgh into the surrounding area. Megabus offers dirt-cheap fares to selected cities across Scotland.

Lothian Buses is the main operator within Edinburgh. You can buy tickets from the driver on the bus, though you will need the exact fare. Alternatively, you can buy tickets in advance at a Lothian Buses store or on your phone through the Lothian Buses M-Tickets app. On a limited (but ever-increasing) number of routes, contactless card payment is also available. In all cases, it's £1.70 for a single ticket or £4 for a day ticket, which allows unlimited one-day travel on the city's buses. A single night ticket costs £3, or you can get unlimited travel from 6 pm to 4:30 am with a DAY&NIGHT ticket (£3.50). ■ TIP → Buses can be packed on Friday and Saturday nights, so you may want to consider a taxi instead.

BUS CONTACTS First Bus. ☎ 0871/200-2233 🌐 www.firstgroup.com. Lothian Buses. ☎ 0131/554-4494 🌐 www.lothian-buses.com. Megabus. ☎ 0900/160-0900 🌐 uk.megabus.com. National Express. ☎ 0871/781-8181 🌐 www.nationalexpress.co.uk.

CAR

It's not necessary to have a car in Edinburgh, as the city is quite walkable and has an extensive and efficient public transport system. Driving in Edinburgh has its quirks and pitfalls—particularly at the height of festival season. Metered parking in the city center is scarce and expensive, and the local traffic wardens are an unforgiving lot. Note that illegally parked cars are routinely towed away, and getting your car back will be expensive. After 6 pm, the parking situation improves considerably, and you may manage to find a space quite near your hotel, even downtown. If you park on a yellow line or in a resident's parking bay, be prepared to move your car by 8 the following morning. Parking lots are clearly signposted; overnight parking is expensive and not always permitted.

TAXI

Taxi stands can be found throughout the city, mostly in the New Town. The following are the most convenient: the west end of Princes Street, South Street, David Street, and North Street, Andrew Street (both just off St. Andrew Square), Waverley Mall, Waterloo Place, and Lauriston Place. Alternatively, hail any taxi displaying an illuminated “for hire” sign.

TRAIN

Edinburgh's main train hub, Edinburgh Waverley station, is downtown, below Waverley Bridge and around the corner from the unmistakable spire of the Scott Monument. Travel time from Edinburgh to London by train is as little as 4½ hours for the fastest service.

Edinburgh's other main station is Haymarket, about four minutes (by rail) west of Edinburgh Waverley. Most Glasgow and other western and northern services stop here.

TRAIN CONTACTS National Rail Enquiries.

☎ 08457/484950 🌐 www.nationalrail.co.uk. ScotRail. ☎ 0344/811-0141 🌐 www.scotrail.co.uk.

TRAM

Absent since 1956, trams returned to the streets of Edinburgh in 2014. The 8½-mile stretch of track currently runs between Edinburgh Airport in the west to York Place in the east, although work is under way to extend it up Leith Walk and to The Shore. Useful stops for travelers include Haymarket, Princes Street, and St. Andrew Square (for Edinburgh Waverley station). Tickets are £1.70 for a single journey in the “City Zone” (which is every stop excluding the airport), or £6 for a single to/from the airport (£8.50 return). Day tickets, allowing unlimited travel, cost £4 in the City Zone and £9 including the airport.

TRAM CONTACTS Edinburgh Trams.

☎ 0131/338-5780 🌐 www.edinburghtrams.co.uk.

Restaurants

Edinburgh's eclectic restaurant scene has attracted a brigade of well-known chefs, including the award-winning trio of Martin Wishart, Tom Kitchin, and Paul Kitching, who have abandoned the tried-and-true recipes for more adventurous cuisine. Of course, you can always find traditional fare, which usually means the Scottish-French style that harks back to the historical “Auld Alliance” of the 13th century. The Scottish element is the preference for fresh and local foodstuffs; the French supplies the sauces. In Edinburgh you can sample anything from Malaysian rendang (a thick, coconut-milk stew) to Kurdish kebabs, while the long-established French, Italian, Chinese, Pakistani, and Indian communities ensure that the majority of the globe's most treasured cuisines are well represented. It's possible to eat well in Edinburgh without spending a fortune. Multicourse prix-fixe options are common, and almost always less expensive than ordering à la carte. Even at restaurants in the highest price category, you can easily spend less than £35 per person. People tend to eat later in Scotland than in England—around 8 pm on average—and then drink on in leisurely Scottish fashion.

Hotels

From stylish boutique hotels to homey bed-and-breakfasts, Edinburgh has a world-class array of accommodation options to suit every taste. Its status as one of Britain's most attractive and fascinating cities ensures a steady influx of visitors, but the wealth of overnight options means there's no need to compromise on where you stay. Grand old hotels are rightly renowned for their regal bearing and old-world charm, but if your tastes are a little more contemporary, the city's burgeoning contingent of chic design hotels offers an equally alluring alternative. For those on a tighter budget, the town's B&Bs are the most obvious choice. If you've previously found B&Bs to be restrictive, keep in mind that Scots are trusting people—many proprietors provide front-door keys and very few impose curfews.

Space is at a premium in August and September, when the Edinburgh International Festival and the Festival Fringe take place, so reserve your room at least three months in advance. B&Bs may prove trickier to find in the winter months (with the exception of Christmas and New Year), as this is when many proprietors choose to close up shop and go on vacation themselves.

To save money and see how local residents live, stay in a B&B in one of the areas away from the city center, such as Pilrig to the north, Murrayfield to the west, or Sciennes to the south. Public buses can whisk you to the city center in 10 to 15 minutes.

Restaurant and hotel reviews have been shortened. For full information, visit Fodors.com. Restaurant prices are the average cost of a main course at dinner or, if dinner is not served, at lunch. Hotel prices are the lowest cost of a standard double room in high season, including 20% V.A.T.

WHAT IT COSTS in Pounds

$	$$	$$$	$$$$
RESTAURANTS
under £15	£15–£19	£20–£25	over £25
HOTELS
under £125	£125–£200	£201–£300	over £300

Nightlife

The nightlife scene in Edinburgh is vibrant—whatever you're looking for, you'll find it here. There are traditional pubs, chic modern bars, and cutting-edge clubs. Live music pours out of many watering holes on weekends, particularly folk, blues, and jazz, while well-known artists perform at some of the larger venues.

Edinburgh's 400-odd pubs are a study in themselves. In the eastern and northern districts of the city, you can find some grim, inhospitable-looking places that proclaim that drinking is no laughing matter. But throughout Edinburgh, many pubs have deliberately traded in their old spit-and-sawdust vibe for atmospheric revivals of the warm, oak-paneled, leather-chaired howffs (meeting places). Most pubs and bars are open weekdays, while on weekends they're open from about 11 am to midnight (some until 2 am on Saturday).

The List and The Skinny carry the most up-to-date details about cultural events. The List is available at newsstands throughout the city, while The Skinny is free and can be picked up at a number of pubs, clubs, and shops around town. The Herald and The Scotsman newspapers are good for reviews and notices of upcoming events throughout the city and beyond.

Performing Arts

Think Edinburgh's arts scene consists of just the elegiac wail of a bagpipe and the twang of a fiddle? Think again. Edinburgh is one of the world's great performing-arts cities. The jewels in the crown are the famed Edinburgh Festival Fringe and Edinburgh International Festival, which attract the best in music, dance, theater, circus, stand-up comedy, poetry, painting, and sculpture from all over the globe in August. The Scotsman and Herald, Scotland's leading daily newspapers, carry listings and reviews in their arts pages every day, with special editions during the festival. Tickets are generally sold in advance; in some cases they're also available from certain designated travel agents or at the door, although concerts by national orchestras often sell out long before the day of the performance.

Shopping

Despite its renown as a shopping street, Princes Street in the New Town may disappoint some visitors with its dull modern architecture, average chain stores, and fast-food outlets. One block north of Princes Street, Rose Street has many smaller specialty shops; part of the street is a pedestrian zone, so it's a pleasant place to browse. The shops on George Street in New Town tend to be fairly upscale, with London names like Laura Ashley and Penhaligons prominent, though some of the older independent stores continue to do good business.

The streets crossing George Street—Hanover, Frederick, and Castle—are also worth exploring. Dundas Street, the northern extension of Hanover Street, beyond Queen Street Gardens, has several antiques shops. Thistle Street, originally George Street's "back lane," or service area, has several boutiques and more antiques shops.

As may be expected, many shops along the Royal Mile in Old Town sell what may be politely or euphemistically described as "touristware"—whiskies, tartans, and tweeds. Careful exploration, however, will reveal some worthwhile establishments, including shops that cater to highly specialized interests and hobbies. A street below the Royal Mile, East Market Street, close to the castle end of the Royal Mile, just off George IV Bridge, is Victoria Street, with specialty shops grouped in a small area. Follow the tiny West Bow to Grassmarket for more specialty stores.

Stafford and William Streets form a small, upscale shopping area in a Georgian setting. Walk to the west end of Princes Street and then along its continuation, Shandwick Place, then turn right onto Stafford Street. William Street crosses Stafford halfway down.

North of Princes Street, on the way to the Royal Botanic Garden Edinburgh, is Stockbridge, an oddball shopping area of some charm, particularly on St. Stephen Street. To get here, walk north down Frederick Street and Howe Street, away from Princes Street, then turn left onto North West Circus Place.

Edinburgh's newest (and hippest) shopping area is The Arches, which has a number of glass-fronted independent stores set within Victorian-era archways. You'll find it on East Market Street, to the east of Edinburgh Waverley train station and below the Royal Mile. And 2020 saw the opening of the refurbished Edinburgh St. James, a vast, state-of-the-art shopping complex between Princes Street and Leith Walk.

Tours

ORIENTATION TOURS

One good way to get oriented in Edinburgh is to take a bus tour. If you want to get to know the area around Edinburgh, Rabbie's Trail Burners leads small groups on several different excursions.

Edinburgh Bus Tours

BUS TOURS | Explore every corner of Edinburgh with this company's range of bus tours. The most popular are the Edinburgh Tour, which mainly covers Old Town sights including Edinburgh Castle, the Royal Mile, and the Palace of Holyroodhouse; and the Majestic Tour, which explores the New Town and farther corners of the city, including the Royal Yacht Britannia at Leith and the Royal Botanic Garden. Buses depart from Waverley Bridge, with each tour lasting an hour.

■ TIP → If you plan more than one bus tour during a weekend, buy a money-saving Grand 48 ticket. ☎ Waverley Bridge, New Town ☎ 0131/220-0770 🌐 www.edinburghbustour.com 📄 From £16.

Rabbie's Trail Burners

EXCURSIONS | Venture farther afield from Edinburgh on day trips run by this cheerful company. Its minibuses will take you a surprisingly long way and back in a day, with sights including Loch Ness, St. Andrews, Rosslyn Chapel, and Loch Lomond National Park. Groups are kept to a guaranteed maximum of 16, giving these a less impersonal feel than some of the big enterprises. ■ TIP → Book online for a discount. ☎ 207 High St., Old Town ☎ 0131/226-3133 🌐 www.rabbies.com 📄 From £29.

PERSONAL GUIDES

Scottish Tourist Guides Association

PERSONAL GUIDES | This organization can supply guides (in 19 languages) who are fully qualified and will meet clients at any point of entry into the United Kingdom or Scotland. Guides can also tailor tours to your interests. ☎ 01786/451953 🌐 www.stga.co.uk 📄 From £150.

WALKING AND CYCLING TOURS

The Cadies and Witchery Tours

WALKING TOURS | Spooky tours tracing Edinburgh's ghouls, murders, and other grisly happenings start outside the Witchery Restaurant. The Cadies and Witchery Tours has built an award-winning reputation for combining entertainment and historical accuracy in its lively and enthusiastic Murder and Mystery and (in summer only) Ghosts and Gore tours. Both take you through the narrow Old Town lanes and closes, with costumed guides and other theatrical characters popping up along the route. ☎ The Witchery, 352 Castlehill, Old Town ☎ 0131/225-6745 🌐 www.witcherytours.com 📄 £10.

The Edinburgh Literary Pub Tour

WALKING TOURS | Professional actors invoke local literary characters while taking you around some of the city's most hallowed watering holes on these lively and informative tours. The experience is led by "Clart and McBrain"—one a bohemian, the other an intellectual—who regale you with witty tales of the literary past of Edinburgh's Old and New Towns. Tours run daily from May to September and meet outside the Beehive Inn. ☎ The Beehive Inn, 18-20 Grassmarket, Edinburgh ☎ 0800/169-7410 🌐 www.edinburghliterarypubtour.co.uk 📄 £14.

★ The Tartan Bicycle Company

BICYCLE TOURS | Cycling enthusiast and Edinburgh native Johann offers a range of guided and self-guided bike tours in and around the capital. Each half-day or full-day tour includes hotel pickup and your choice of standard or e-bikes. For a relaxed half-day introduction to Edinburgh, including some lesser-visited neighborhoods, opt for the Sky to Sea tour; it starts at leafy Union Canal, passes by The Meadows and Arthur's Seat, visits Portobello Beach, The Shore, and the Water of Leith, and ends in the New Town. ☎ Edinburgh ☎ 0797/394-0924 🌐 www.tartanbiketours.co.uk 📄 From £45.

Visitor Information

The VisitScotland Edinburgh iCentre, located close to St. Giles' Cathedral on the Royal Mile, offers an accommodation-booking service, along with regular tourist information services.

VISITOR INFORMATION VisitScotland Edinburgh iCentre. ☎ 249 High St., Old Town ☎ 0131/473-3868 🌐 www.visitscotland.com.

Activities

FOOTBALL

Like Glasgow, Edinburgh is mad for football (soccer in the United States), and there's an intense rivalry between the city's two professional teams.

Heart of Midlothian Football Club

SOCCER | Better known simply as "Hearts," the Heart of Midlothian Football Club plays in maroon and white and is based at Tynecastle. The club's crest is based on the Heart of Midlothian mosaic on the Royal Mile. ☎ Tynecastle Stadium, McLeod St., Edinburgh ☎ 0333/043-1874 🌐 www.heartsfc.co.uk.

Hibernian Football Club

SOCCER | Known to most as simply "Hibs," the green-and-white-bedecked Hibernian Club was founded in 1875—one year after Hearts—and plays its home matches at Easter Road Stadium in Leith. ☎ Easter Road Stadium, 12 Albion Pl., Leith ☎ 0131/661-2159 🌐 www.hibernianfc.co.uk.

GOLF

Edinburgh is widely considered to be the birthplace of modern golf, as its first official rules were developed at Leith Links. Naturally, there are a number of great courses in the city. For more information, the VisitScotland website has an extensive, searchable guide to Scottish courses.

Braid Hills

GOLF | This golf course is beautifully laid out over a rugged range of small hills in the southern suburbs of Edinburgh. The views in each direction—the Pentland Hills to the south, the city skyline and Firth of Forth to the north—are worth a visit in themselves. The city built this course at the turn of the 20th century after urban development forced golfers out of the city center. There's also a nine-hole "Wee Braids" course for beginners and younger players. Reservations are recommended for weekend play. ☎ 27 Braids Hill Approach, Edinburgh ☎ 0131/447-6666 🌐 www.edinburghleisure.co.uk 📄 Braids: £26.50 weekday, £27.50 weekends; Wee Braids: £15 weekdays, £16 weekends. 🏌️ Braids: 18 holes, 5865 yards, par 71; Wee Braids: 9 holes, 2232 yards, par 31.

Bruntsfield Links

GOLF | The British Seniors and several other championship tournaments are held at this prestigious Willie Park–designed course. It's located 3 miles west of Edinburgh, and should not be confused with Bruntsfield Links park in the city center. The course meanders among 155 acres of mature parkland and has fine views over the Firth of Forth. A strict dress code applies. Bruntsfield takes its name from one of the oldest golf links in Scotland, in the center of Edinburgh, where the club used to play—all that remains there is a nine-hole pitch-and-putt course. ■ TIP → Full-day tickets are available for just £20 more than the cost of a single round on weekends. ☎ 32 Barn-ton Ave., Edinburgh ☎ 0131/336-1479 🌐 www.bruntsfieldlinks.co.uk 📄 £90 weekdays, £110 weekends Apr.–Sept.; £60 weekdays, £80 weekends Oct.; £30 Nov.–Mar. 🏌️ 18 holes, 6437 yards, par 70 📄 Reservations essential.

Duddingston Golf Club

GOLF | Founded in 1895, this excellent public parkland course is 2 miles east of the city. The first hole is located in an idyllic deer park (watch out for four-legged spectators). Braid Burn—a stream that flows across the southern part of Edinburgh—also runs through the course, creating a perilous hazard on many holes. Prices drop sharply in the winter months for those willing to risk strong winds and rain. ☎ Duddingston Rd. W, Duddingston ☎ 0131/661-7688 🌐 www.duddingston-golfclub.co.uk 🕒 £55 May–Sept.; £29 Mar.–Apr. and Oct.–Nov.; £20 Nov.–Feb. 🏌️ 18 holes, 6466 yards, par 72.

Royal Burgess Golfing Society

GOLF | Edinburgh's other Victorian courses are newcomers when compared to Royal Burgess, which opened in 1735. Its members originally played on Bruntsfield Links; now they and their guests play on elegantly manicured parkland in the city's northwestern suburbs. It's a challenging course with fine, beautifully maintained greens. There's a fairly conservative dress code—no denim or T-shirts allowed, and you must wear a jacket and tie in the clubhouse. ☎ 181 Whitehouse Rd., Barnton ☎ 0131/339-2075 🌐 www.royal-burgess.co.uk 🕒 £100 for 1 round; £150 day ticket 🏌️ 18 holes, 6511 yards, par 71 📅 Reservations essential.

RUGBY

Edinburgh is the home of Scottish rugby, with national stadium Murrayfield hosting regular international matches. It's also home to several amateur clubs and the professional club Edinburgh Rugby, who compete in the international Pro14 League.

★ Murrayfield Stadium

RUGBY | Home of the Scottish Rugby Union, Murrayfield Stadium hosts rugby matches in early spring and fall, as well as prestigious Six Nations tournament games in February and March. Crowds of good-humored rugby fans from all over the world add greatly to the sense of excitement in the streets of Edinburgh. Stick around after the game as there's often live music, food, and drinks to enjoy in the stadium grounds. Outside of the rugby season, you can still see Murrayfield with a stadium tour; tickets are £12 for adults. ☎ Roseburn St., Murrayfield ☎ 0131/346-5000 🌐 www.scottishrugby.org.

Old Town

East of Edinburgh Castle, the historic castle esplanade becomes the street known as the Royal Mile, leading down through Old Town to the Palace of Holyroodhouse. The Mile, as it's known locally, is actually made up of one thoroughfare that bears, in consecutive sequence, different names—Castlehill, Lawnmarket, Parliament Square, High Street, and Canongate. This thoroughfare, and the streets and passages that wind off it on both sides, really were Edinburgh until the 18th century saw expansions to the south and north. Everybody lived here: the richer folk on the lower floors of houses; the less well-to-do families on the middle floors; and the poor highest up.

Time and progress (of a sort) have swept away some of the narrow closes and tall tenements of the Old Town, but enough survive for you to be able to imagine the original profile of Scotland's capital. There are many guided tours of the area, or you can simply stroll around at your leisure. The latter is often a better choice in summer, when tourists pack the area and large guided groups have trouble making their way through the crowds.

👁 Sights

Arthur's Seat

VIEWPOINT | The high point of 640-acre Holyrood Park is this famously spectacular viewpoint. You'll have seen it before—countless photos have been snapped from this very spot. The “seat” in question is actually the 822-foot-high plateau of a small mountain. A ruined church—the 15th-century Chapel of St. Anthony—adds to its impossible picturesqueness. There are various starting points for the walk, but one of the most pleasant begins at the Scottish Parliament building. Cross the road from Parliament, skirt around the parking lot, cross a second road, and join the gently rising path to the left (rather than the steeper fork to the right). At a moderate pace, this climb takes around 45 minutes up and 30 minutes down, and is easy so long as you're reasonably fit. Even if you aren't, there are plenty of places to stop for a rest and to admire the views along the way. A faster—though less beautiful—way to reach the summit is to drive to the small parking area at Dunsapie Loch, on Queen's Road, then follow the footpath up the hill; this walk takes about 20 minutes. ☎ Queen's Dr., Old Town.

Camera Obscura and World of Illusions

OBSERVATORY | FAMILY | View Edinburgh like a Victorian at the city's 19th-century camera obscura. Head up Outlook Tower for the headline attraction—an optical instrument that affords live bird's-eye views of the city, illuminated onto a concave table. It's been wowing visitors since 1853, and yet it retains a magical quality that can captivate even the most cynical smartphone-toting teen. After you've seen the camera obscura and enjoyed the rooftop views, head down to explore five more floors of interactive optical illusions. They are guaranteed to keep the kids entertained and educated for an hour or two. ☎ 549 Castlehill, Old Town ☎ 0131/226-3709 🌐 www.camera-obscura.co.uk 🕒 £16.

Canongate

NEIGHBORHOOD | This section of the Royal Mile takes its name from the canons who once ran the abbey at Holyrood. Canongate—in Scots, gate means “street”—was originally an independent town, or burgh, another Scottish term used to refer to a community with trading rights granted by the monarch. In this area you'll find Canongate Kirk and its graveyard, Canongate Tolbooth, as well as the Museum of Edinburgh. ☎ Royal Mile, between High St. and Abbey Strand, Old Town.

Canongate Kirk

RELIGIOUS SITE | This unadorned Church of Scotland building, built in 1688, is best known for its graveyard. It is the final resting place of some notable Scots, including economist Adam Smith (1723–90), author of The Wealth of Nations (1776); Dugald Stewart (1753–1828), the leading European philosopher of his time; and the undervalued Scottish poet Robert Fergusson (1750–74). The fact that Fergusson's grave is even distinguishable is due to the far more famous Robert Burns (1759–96), who commissioned a marker to be made. Incidentally, Robert Burns's literary lover Agnes McLehose (the “Clarinda” to his “Sylvander” as noted in a series of passionate letters) also has a memorial stone here. ☎ 153 Canongate, Old Town ☎ 0131/556-3515 🌐 canongatekirk.org.uk 🕒 Closed Oct.–Apr.

Canongate Tolbooth and People's Story Museum

MUSEUM | Nearly every city and town in Scotland once had a tolbooth. Originally a customhouse, where tolls were gathered, it soon came to mean town hall and later prison, as there were detention cells in the cellar. The building where Canongate's town council once met now has a museum, the People's Story Museum, which focuses on the lives of everyday folk from the 18th century to today. Exhibits describe how Canongate once bustled with the activities of the tradespeople needed to supply life's essentials. There are also displays on the politics, health care, and leisure time (such as it was) in days of yore. Other exhibits leap forward in time to show, for example, a typical 1940s kitchen. ☎ 163

Sights

- | | | | |
|---------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------|------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------|
| 1 Arthur's Seat J5 | 6 Castlehill C4 | 14 Greyfriars Kirkyard D5 | 20 National Museum of Scotland E5 |
| 2 Camera Obscura and World of Illusions C4 | 7 Craigmillar Castle G7 | 15 High Kirk of St. Giles D4 | 21 Palace of Holyroodhouse I2 |
| 3 Canongate F3 | 8 Dynamic Earth I3 | 16 High Street D3 | 22 Princes Street Gardens D2 |
| 4 Canongate Kirk G2 | 9 Duddingston Village J7 | 17 Lawnmarket D4 | 23 The Real Mary King's Close D3 |
| 5 Canongate Tolbooth and People's Story Museum G3 | 10 Edinburgh Castle B4 | 18 Museum of Childhood F3 | |
| | 11 George IV Bridge D5 | 19 Museum of Edinburgh G3 | |
| | 12 Gladstone's Land C4 | | |
| | 13 Grassmarket B5 | | |

Sights

- | |
|----------------------------------------------------------|
| 24 The Scottish Parliament H2 |
| 25 Scotch Whisky Experience C4 |
| 26 Scottish Storytelling Centre and John Knox House.. F3 |
| 27 Writers' Museum C4 |

Restaurants

- | |
|----------------------------------|
| 1 Checkpoint E5 |
| 2 Cannonball Restaurant C4 |
| 3 David Bann F4 |
| 4 Hanam's C4 |
| 5 Howies D4 |
| 6 La Garrigue F3 |

Hotels

- | |
|-------------------------------------------------|
| 7 Lovecumbs A5 |
| 8 Michael Neave Kitchen and Whisky Bar E4 |
| 9 Oink C4 |
| 10 Ondine D4 |
| 11 Timbryard A5 |
| 12 Wedgwood the Restaurant F3 |

Hotels

- | |
|--------------------------------------------------|
| 1 Radisson Collection Royal Mile Edinburgh .. D4 |
| 2 Hotel du Vin E5 |
| 3 The Inn on the Mile E3 |
| 4 The Scotsman E3 |
| 5 The Witchery by the Castle C4 |

Canongate, Old Town ☎ 0131/529-4057
 🌐 www.edinburghmuseums.org.uk.

Castlehill

NEIGHBORHOOD | This street, the upper portion of the Royal Mile, was where alleged witches were brought in the 16th century to be burned at the stake. The cannonball embedded in the west gable of Castlehill's Cannonball House was, according to legend, fired from the castle during the Jacobite Rebellion of 1745, led by Bonnie Prince Charlie (1720–88)—though the truth is probably that it was installed there deliberately in 1681 as a height marker for Edinburgh's first piped water-supply system. Atop the Gothic Tolbooth Kirk, built in 1844 for the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, stands the tallest spire in the city, at 240 feet. The church now houses the cheery Edinburgh Festival offices and a pleasant café known as The Hub. ☎ East of Esplanade and west of Lawnmarket, Old Town.

Craigmillar Castle

CASTLE/PALACE | This handsome medieval ruin, only 3 miles south of the city center, is the archetypal Scottish fortress: forbidding, powerful, and laden with atmosphere. It is best known for its association with Mary, Queen of Scots: during a stay here in 1563, her courtiers hatched the successful plot to murder her troublesome husband, Henry Stuart (possibly with Mary's approval). Today Craigmillar is one of the most impressive ruined castles in Scotland. Stroll its beautiful courtyard, enter the well-preserved great hall, or climb the 15th-century tower for a superb view across the city. Look out for the unusually ornate defensive arrow slits, shaped like inverted keyholes. ☎ Craigmillar Castle Rd., South Side ☎ 0131/661-4445 🌐 www.historicenvironment.scot 🎫 £6 ☺ Closed Thurs. and Fri. Oct.–Apr.

Dynamic Earth

MUSEUM | FAMILY | Using state-of-the-art technology, the 11 theme galleries at this interactive science museum educate and entertain as they explore the wonders of the planet, from polar regions to tropical rain forests. Geological history, from the big bang to the unknown future, is also examined, all topped off with a 360-degree Showdome movie-theater experience. Book tickets online for a 10% discount. ☎ 112–116 Holyrood Rd., Old Town ☎ 0131/550-7800 🌐 www.dynamiacearth.co.uk 🎫 £15.95 at door; £14.50 online ☺ Closed Mon. and Tues. Nov.–Feb.

Duddingston Village

TOWN | Tucked behind Arthur's Seat, and about a 45-minute walk through Holyrood Park, lies this small community, which still has the feel of a country village. The Duddingston Kirk has a Norman doorway and a watchtower that was built to keep body snatchers out of the graveyard; it overlooks Duddingston Loch, popular with bird-watchers. Pathways meander down to lochside Thomson's Tower, an octagonal tower built in 1825 and now home to a small museum. Nearby, Edinburgh's oldest hostelry, the Sheep Heid Inn, serves a wide selection of beers and hearty food. It also has the oldest skittle (bowling) alley in Scotland—once frequented, it's said, by Mary, Queen of Scots. ☎ Duddingston Low Rd., Duddingston.

★ Edinburgh Castle

CASTLE/PALACE | FAMILY | The crowning glory of the Scottish capital, Edinburgh Castle is popular not only for its pivotal role in Scottish history, but also because of the spectacular views from its battlements: on a clear day the vistas stretch all the way to Fife. You'll need at least three hours to see everything it has to offer (even longer if you're a military history buff), though if you're in a rush, its main highlights can just about be squeezed into an hour and a half.

You enter across the Esplanade, the huge forecourt built in the 18th century as a parade ground. The area comes alive with color and music each August when it's used for the Military Tattoo, a festival of

An emblem of the city's history, the rock where Edinburgh Castle stands has been inhabited as far back as 1,000 BC.

magnificently outfitted marching bands and regiments. Head over the drawbridge and through the gatehouse, past the guards, and you'll find the rough stone walls of the Half-Moon Battery, where the one-o'clock gun is fired every day in an impressively anachronistic ceremony; these curving ramparts give Edinburgh Castle its distinctive silhouette. Climb up through a second gateway and you come to the oldest surviving building in the complex, the tiny 11th-century St. Margaret's Chapel, named in honor of Saxon queen Margaret (1046–93), who persuaded her husband, King Malcolm III (circa 1031–93), to move his court from Dunfermline to Edinburgh. The story goes that Edinburgh's environs—the Lothians—were occupied by Anglian settlers with whom the queen felt more at home, as opposed to the Celts who surrounded Dunfermline. The Crown Room, a must-see, contains the "Honours of Scotland"—the crown, scepter, and sword that once graced the Scottish monarch—as well as the Stone of Scone, upon which Scottish monarchs once sat to be crowned (it's still a feature of British coronation ceremonies today). In the section now called Queen Mary's Apartments, Mary, Queen of Scots, gave birth to James VI of Scotland. The Great Hall, which held Scottish Parliament meetings until 1840, displays arms and armor under an impressive vaulted, beamed ceiling.

Military features of interest include the Scottish National War Memorial, the Scottish United Services Museum, and the famous 15th-century Belgian-made cannon Mons Meg. This enormous piece of artillery has been silent since 1682, when it exploded while firing a salute for the Duke of York; it now stands in an ancient hall behind the Half-Moon Battery. Contrary to what you may hear from locals, it's not Mons Meg but the battery's gun that goes off with a bang every weekday at 1 pm, frightening visitors and reminding Edinburghers to check their watches.

■ TIP → Avoid the queues and save some money by buying tickets in advance online. When you arrive, you can pick up your

The History of Edinburgh Castle

Archaeological investigations have established that the rock on which Edinburgh Castle stands was inhabited as far back as 1,000 BC, in the latter part of the Bronze Age. There have been fortifications here since the mysterious tribal Picts first used it as a stronghold in the 3rd and 4th centuries AD. Anglian invaders from northern England dislodged the Picts in AD 452, and for the next 1,300 years the site saw countless battles and skirmishes.

In the castle you'll hear the story of how Randolph, Earl of Moray and nephew of freedom fighter Robert the Bruce, scaled the heights one dark night in 1313, surprised the English guard, and recaptured the castle for the Scots. During this battle he destroyed every one of the castle's buildings except for St. Margaret's Chapel, dating from around 1076, so that successive Stewart kings had to rebuild the castle bit by bit.

The castle has been held over time by Scots and Englishmen, Catholics and Protestants, soldiers and royalty. In the 16th century Mary, Queen of Scots, gave birth here to the future James VI of Scotland (1566–1625), who was also to rule England as James I. In 1573 it was the last fortress to support Mary's claim as the rightful Catholic queen of Britain, causing the castle to be virtually destroyed by English artillery fire.

ticket from one of the automated collection points at the entrance. ☒ Castle Esplanade and Castlehill, Old Town ☎ 0131/225–9846 🌐 www.edinburghcastle.scot 🎫 £17.50.

George IV Bridge

BRIDGE/TUNNEL | Here's a curiosity—a bridge that most of its users don't ever realize is a bridge. With buildings closely packed on both sides, George IV Bridge can feel to many like a regular Edinburgh street, but for those forewarned, the truth is plain to see. At the corner of the bridge stands one of the most photographed sculptures in Scotland, Greyfriars Bobby. This statue pays tribute to the legendarily loyal Skye terrier who kept vigil beside his master's grave for 14 years after he died in 1858. The 1961 Walt Disney film Greyfriars Bobby tells a version of the heartrending tale. ☒ Bank St. and Lawnmarket, Old Town.

Gladstone's Land

HOUSE | This narrow, six-story tenement, situated next to the Assembly Hall, is one of the oldest buildings on the Royal Mile.

It's a survivor from the early 17th century, and now stands as a re-creation of the living conditions of the time. Rooms are decorated in authentic period furnishings, and the sense of how cramped life must have been, even for the moderately successful, is deftly portrayed. Typical Scottish architectural features are evident on two floors, including an arcaded ground floor (even in the city center, livestock sometimes inhabited the ground floor) and some magnificent painted ceilings. Look out for the lovely spinet in the drawing room; the ingeniously designed instrument, resembling a space-saving piano, plucks strings rather than strikes them, producing a resonantly baroque sound. ☒ 477B Lawnmarket, Old Town ☎ 0131/226–5856 🌐 www.nts.org.uk 🎫 £7.

Grassmarket

PLAZA | For centuries an agricultural marketplace, Grassmarket is now the site of numerous shops, bars, and restaurants, making it a hive of activity at night. Sections of the Old Town wall can be traced

Grassmarket Gallows

Grassmarket's history is long and gory. The cobbled cross at the east end marks the site of the town gallows. Among those hanged here were many 17th-century Covenanters, members of the Church of Scotland who rose up against Charles I's efforts to enforce Anglican or "English" ideologies on the Scottish people. Judges were known to issue the death sentence for these religious reformers with the words,

"Let them glorify God in the Grassmarket." Two Grassmarket pubs have names that reference the hangings: The Last Drop and Maggie Dickson's. The latter references a woman who was hanged and proclaimed dead, but when traveling for her burial, sprang back to life. She lived for another 40 years with the nickname Half-Hangit Maggie.

on the north side by a series of steps that ascend from Grassmarket to Johnston Terrace. The best-preserved section of the wall can be found by crossing to the south side and climbing the steps of the lane called the Vennel. Here the 16th-century Flodden Wall comes in from the east and turns south at Telfer's Wall, a 17th-century extension.

From the northeast corner of the Grassmarket, Victoria Street, a 19th-century addition to the Old Town, leads to the George IV Bridge. Shops here sell antiques, designer clothing, and souvenirs. ☒ Grassmarket, Edinburgh.

★ Greyfriars Kirkyard

CEMETERY | This sprawling, hillside graveyard, surely one of the most evocative in Europe (particularly at twilight), is a giddy mess of old, tottering tombstones that mark the graves of some of Scotland's most respected heroes and despised villains. Many of these inspired character names in the Harry Potter book series; fans can seek out Potters, McGonagalls, and Moodies, to name a few. Among the larger tombs arranged in avenues and the seemingly random assortment of grave markers, lie two rare surviving mortsafes: iron cages erected around graves in the early 1800s to prevent the theft of corpses for sale to medical schools.

At the southern end of the graveyard stands Greyfriars Kirk, the church where the National Covenant—a document declaring the Presbyterian Church in Scotland independent of the monarchy, and which plunged Scotland into decades of civil war—was signed in 1638. Nearby, at the corner of George IV Bridge and Candlemaker Row, stands one of Scotland's most photographed sites: the statue of Greyfriars Bobby, a Skye terrier who supposedly spent 14 years guarding the grave of his departed owner. ☒ Greyfriars Pl., Old Town ☎ 0131/225–1900 🌐 www.greyfriarskirk.com/visit-us/kirk-yard 🎫 Free.

High Kirk of St. Giles (St Giles' Cathedral) RELIGIOUS SITE | St. Giles, which lies about one-third of the way along the Royal Mile from Edinburgh Castle, is one of the city's principal churches. It may not quite rival Paris's Notre Dame or London's Westminster Abbey—it's more like a large parish church than a great European cathedral—but it has a long and storied history. There has been a church here since AD 854, although most of the present structure dates from either 1120 or 1829, when the church was restored.

The tower, with its stone crown 161 feet above the ground, was completed between 1495 and 1500. Inside the church stands a life-size statue of the Scot whose spirit still dominates the place—the great religious reformer and preacher John Knox. But the most elaborate feature is the Chapel of the Order of the Thistle, built onto the southeast corner of the church in 1911 for the exclusive use of Scotland's only chivalric order, the Most Ancient and Noble Order of the Thistle. It bears the belligerent national motto "nemo me impune lacessit" ("No one provokes me with impunity"). Look out for the carved wooden angel playing bagpipes. ☒ High St., Old Town ☎ 0131/225-9442 🌐 www.stgilescathedral.org.uk 🆓 Free, but donations welcome.

The Greyfriars Kirkyard, part of the church Greyfriars Kirk, is allegedly one of the most haunted cemeteries in Europe.

High Street

NEIGHBORHOOD | The High Street (one of the five streets that make up the Royal Mile) is home to an array of impressive buildings and sights, including some hidden historic relics. Near Parliament Square, look on the west side for a heart mosaic set in cobblestones. This marks the site of the vanished Old Tolbooth, the center of city life from the 15th century until the building's demolition in 1817. The ancient municipal building was used as a prison and a site of public execution, so you may witness a local spitting on the heart as one walks by—for good luck.

Just outside Parliament House lies the Mercat Cross (mercat means "market"), a great landmark of Old Town life. It was an old mercantile center, where royal proclamations were—and are still—read. Most of the present cross is comparatively modern, dating from the time of William Gladstone (1809–98), the great Victorian prime minister and rival of Benjamin Disraeli (1804–81). Across High Street from the High Kirk of St. Giles stands the City Chambers, now the seat of local government. Built by John Fergus, who adapted a design of John Adam in 1753, the chambers were originally known as the Royal Exchange and intended to be where merchants and lawyers could conduct business. Note how the building drops 11 stories to Cockburn Street on its north side.

A tron is a weigh beam used in public weigh houses, and the Tron Kirk was named after a salt tron that used to stand nearby. The kirk (church) itself was built after 1633, when St. Giles's became an Episcopal cathedral for a brief time. In 1693 a minister here delivered an often-quoted prayer: "Lord, hae mercy on a' [all] fools and idiots, and particularly on the Magistrates of Edinburgh." ☒ Between Lawnmarket and Canongate, Old Town.

Lawnmarket

NEIGHBORHOOD | The second of the streets that make up the Royal Mile, this was formerly the site of the city's produce market, with a once-a-week special sale of wool and linen. Now it's home to Gladstone's Land and the Writers' Museum. At various times, the Lawnmarket Courts housed James Boswell, David Hume, and Robert Burns, while in the 1770s this area was home to the infamous Deacon Brodie, pillar of society by day and a murdering gang leader by night. Robert Louis Stevenson (1850–94) may well have used Brodie as the inspiration for his novella Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. ☒ Between Castlehill and High St., Old Town.

Museum of Childhood

MUSEUM | FAMILY | Even adults tend to enjoy this cheerfully noisy museum—a cacophony of childhood memorabilia, vintage toys, antique dolls, and fairground games. The museum claims to have been the first in the world devoted solely to the history of childhood. ☒ 42 High St., Old Town ☎ 0131/529-4142 🌐 www.edinburghmuseums.org.uk.

Museum of Edinburgh

MUSEUM | A must-see if you're interested in the details of Old Town life, this bright yellow, 16th-century building is home to a fascinating museum of local history. It houses some of the most important artifacts in Scottish history—including the National Covenant, a document signed by Scotland's Presbyterian leadership in defiance of a reformed liturgy imposed by King Charles I of England that ignited decades of civil war—alongside Scottish pottery, silver, and glassware, as well as curios like Greyfriars Bobby's dog collar. ☒ 142–146 Canongate, Old Town ☎ 0131/529-4143 🌐 www.edinburghmuseums.org.uk.

★ National Museum of Scotland

MUSEUM | FAMILY | This museum traces the country's fascinating story from the oldest fossils to the most recent popular culture, making it a must-see for first-time visitors to Scotland. Two of the most famous treasures are the Lewis Chessmen, 11 intricately carved 12th-century ivory chess pieces found on one of Scotland's Western Isles, and Dolly the sheep, the world's first cloned mammal and biggest ovine celebrity. A dramatic, cryptlike entrance gives way to the light-filled, birdcage wonders of the Victorian grand hall and the upper galleries. Other exhibition highlights include the hanging hippo and sea creatures of the Wildlife Panorama, beautiful Viking brooches, Pictish stones, and Queen Mary's clarsach (harp). Take the elevator to the lovely rooftop terrace for spectacular views of Edinburgh Castle and the city below. ☒ Chambers St., Old Town ☎ 0300/123-6789 🌐 www.nms.ac.uk 🆓 Free.

★ Palace of Holyroodhouse

CASTLE/PALACE | The one-time haunt of Mary, Queen of Scots with a long history of gruesome murder, destructive fire, and power-hungry personalities, the Palace of Holyroodhouse is now Queen Elizabeth's official residence in Scotland. A doughty, impressive palace standing at the foot of the Royal Mile, it's built around a graceful, lawned central court at the end of Canongate. And when royals are not in residence, you can take a tour. There's plenty to see here, so make sure you have at least two hours to tour the palace, gardens, and the ruins of the 12th-century abbey; pick up the free audio guide for the full experience.

The Building of Edinburgh

Towering over the city, Edinburgh Castle was actually built over the plug of an ancient volcano. Many millennia ago, an eastward-grinding glacier encountered the tough basalt core of the volcano and swept around it, scouring steep cliffs and leaving a trail of matter. This material formed a ramp gently leading down from the rocky summit. On this crag and tail would grow the city of Edinburgh and its castle.

Castle, Walled Town, and Holyroodhouse

By the 12th century Edinburgh had become a walled town, still perched on the hill. Its shape was becoming clearer: like a fish with its head at the castle, its backbone running down the ridge, and its ribs leading briefly off on either side. The backbone gradually became the continuous thoroughfare now known as the Royal Mile, and the ribs became the closes (alleyways), some still surviving, that were the scene of many historic incidents.

By the early 15th century, Edinburgh had become the undisputed capital of Scotland. The bitter defeat of Scotland at Flodden in 1513, when Scotland aligned itself with France against England, caused a new defensive city wall to be built. Though the castle escaped destruction, the city was burned by the English Earl of Hertford under orders from King Henry VIII (1491–1547). This was during a time known as the “Rough Wooing,” when Henry was trying to coerce the Scots into allowing the young Mary, Queen of Scots (1542–87), to marry his son Edward. The plan failed and Mary married Francis, the Dauphin of France.

By 1561, when Mary returned from France already widowed, the guest-house of the Abbey of Holyrood had grown to become the Palace of Holyroodhouse, replacing Edinburgh Castle as the main royal residence. Her legacy to the city included the destruction of most of the earliest buildings of Edinburgh Castle.

Enlightenment and the City

In the trying decades after the union with England in 1707, many influential Scots, both in Edinburgh and elsewhere, went through an identity crisis. Out of the 18th-century difficulties, however, grew the Scottish Enlightenment, during which educated Scots made great strides in medicine, economics, and science.

Changes came to the cityscape, too. By the mid-18th century, it had become the custom for wealthy Scottish landowners to spend the winter in the Old Town of Edinburgh, in town houses huddled between the high Castle Rock and the Royal Palace below. Cross-fertilized in coffee-houses and taverns, intellectual notions flourished among a people determined to remain Scottish despite their Parliament being dissolved. One result was a campaign to expand and beautify the city, to give it a look worthy of its future nickname, the Athens of the North. Thus, the New Town of Edinburgh was built, with broad streets and gracious buildings creating a harmony that even today's throbbing traffic cannot obscure.

The Grand Gallery of the National Museum of Scotland is reminiscent of a classic Victorian arcade mall.

Many monarchs, including Charles II, Queen Victoria, and George V, have left their mark on the rooms here, but it's Mary, Queen of Scots whose spirit looms largest. Perhaps the most memorable room is the chamber in which David Rizzio (1533–66), secretary to Mary, met a nasty end in 1566, stabbed more than 50 times by the henchmen of her second husband, Lord Darnley. Darnley himself was murdered the next year, clearing the way for the queen's marriage to her lover, the Earl of Bothwell.

The King James Tower is the oldest surviving section of the palace, containing Mary's rooms on the second floor, and Lord Darnley's rooms below. Though much has been altered, there are fine fireplaces, paneling, tapestries, and 18th- and 19th-century furnishings throughout. At the south end of the palace front, you'll find the Royal Dining Room, and along the south side is the Throne Room, now used for social and ceremonial occasions.

At the back of the palace is the King's Bedchamber. The 150-foot-long Great Picture Gallery, on the north side, displays the portraits of 110 Scottish monarchs. These were commissioned by Charles II, who was eager to demonstrate his Scottish ancestry—but most of the people depicted are entirely fictional, and the likenesses of several others were invented and simply given the names of real people. The Queen's Gallery, in a former church and school at the entrance to the palace, holds rotating exhibits from the Royal Collection. There is a separate admission charge.

Holyroodhouse has its origins in an Augustinian monastery founded by David I (1084–1153) in 1128. In the 15th and 16th centuries, Scottish royalty, preferring the comforts of the abbey to drafty Edinburgh Castle, settled into Holyroodhouse, expanding the buildings until the palace eclipsed the monastery. Nevertheless, you can still walk around some evocative abbey ruins.

After the Union of the Crowns in 1603, when the Scottish royal court packed its bags and decamped to England, the building began to fall into disrepair. It was Charles II (1630–85) who rebuilt Holyrood in the architectural style of Louis XIV (1638–1715), and this is the style you see today. Queen Victoria (1819–1901) and her grandson King George V (1865–1936) renewed interest in the palace, and the buildings were refurbished and again made suitable for royal residence. 📍 Canongate, Old Town ☎ 0131/123–7306 🌐 www.rct.uk 🎫 £15; £24.50 includes Queen's Gallery and a garden history tour.

Princes Street Gardens

CITY PARK | These beautifully manicured gardens, directly overlooked by Edinburgh Castle, are just a few steps and yet a whole world away from bustling Princes Street. The 38-acre park, divided into the East and West Gardens, was first laid out in the 1760s, on marshland created by the draining of a (long-since-vanished) loch. It has a host of attractions, including a functioning floral clock on the corner of Princes Street and The Mound, the Ross Fountain, a series of memorials, a children's play park, and a café. The gardens often host free concerts, and have a central role in the city's famed Hogmanay festivities. 📍 Princes St., Old Town.

The Real Mary King's Close

NEIGHBORHOOD | FAMILY | Buried beneath the City Chambers, this narrow, cobbled close (alleyway) provides a glimpse into a very different Edinburgh. It was once a busy open-air thoroughfare with hundreds of residents and a lively market, but in 1753 it was sealed off when the Royal Exchange (now the City Chambers) was built on top. Today costumed guides take you around the claustrophobic remains of the shops and houses, describing life here for the residents from plague and quarantine to rivers of sewage, as well as the odd murder mystery and ghost story. But for all the (somewhat over-the-top) theatricality, the real highlights here are historical; the sealed-in street is a truly fascinating insight into 17th-century Edinburgh. 📍 2 Warriston's Cl., Old Town ☎ 0131/225–0672 🌐 www.realmmarykingsclose.com 🎫 £16.50.

The Scottish Parliament

GOVERNMENT BUILDING | Scotland's now-iconic Parliament building is starkly modernist, with irregular curves and angles that mirror the twisting shapes of the surrounding landscape. Stylistically, it is about as far removed from Westminster as can be. Originally conceived by the late Catalan architect Enric Miralles, and completed by his widow Benedetta Tagliabue, the structure's artistry is most apparent when you step inside. The gentle slopes, the forest's worth of oak, the polished concrete and granite, and the walls of glass create an understated magnificence. Take a free guided tour to see the main hall and debating chamber, a committee room, and other areas of the building, or choose a specialist subject for your tour, from history to literature to art. All tour reservations must be made online. Call well in advance to get a free ticket to view Parliament in action. 📍 Horse Wynd, Old Town ☎ 0131/348–5000 🌐 www.parliament.scot ☹ Closed Sun.

Scotch Whisky Experience

MUSEUM | Transforming malted barley and spring water into one of Scotland's most important exports—that's the subject of this popular Royal Mile attraction. An imaginative approach to the subject has guests riding in low-speed barrel cars and exploring Scotland's diverse whisky regions and their distinct flavors. Sniff the various aromas and decide whether you like fruity, sweet, or smoky, and afterward experts will help you select your perfect dram. Your guide will then take you into a vault containing the world's largest collection of Scotch whiskies. Opt for one of the premium tours (from £28 to £75) for extras ranging from additional tastings to a Scottish dining experience. 📍 354 Castlehill, Old Town ☎ 0131/220–0441 🌐 www.scotchwhiskyexperience.co.uk 🎫 From £16.

The Palace of Holyroodhouse is the Queen's official residence in Scotland and the setting of a few key scenes in the television show Outlander.

★ Scottish Storytelling Centre and John Knox House

ARTS VENUE | The stripped-down, low-fi, traditional art of storytelling has had something of a resurgence in Britain over the last decade or so, and there are few places better than this to experience a master storyteller in full flow. Housed in a modern building that manages to blend seamlessly with the historic structures on either side, the center hosts a year-round program of storytelling, theater, music, and literary events. A great little café serves lunch, tea, and home-baked cakes.

The center's storytellers also hold tours of John Knox House next door. It isn't certain that the religious reformer ever lived here, but there's evidence he died here in 1572. Mementos of his life are on view inside, and the distinctive dwelling gives you a glimpse of what Old Town life was like in the 16th century—projecting upper floors were once commonplace along the Royal Mile. 📍 43–45 High St., Old Town ☎ 0131/556–9579 🌐 www.scottishstorytellingcentre.com 🎫 Storytelling Centre free; John Knox House £6 ☹ Closed Sun. Sept.–June.

Writers' Museum

MUSEUM | Situated down a narrow close off Lawnmarket is the 1662 Lady Stair's House, a fine example of 17th-century urban architecture. Inside, the Writers' Museum evokes Scotland's literary past with such exhibits as the letters, possessions, and original manuscripts of Sir Walter Scott, Robert Burns, and Robert Louis Stevenson. 📍 Lady Stair's Close, Old Town ☎ 0131/529–4901 🌐 www.edinburghmuseums.org.uk.

🍴 Restaurants

The most historic part of the city houses some of its grander restaurants (though, curiously, none of its current Michelin stars). It is also home to some of Edinburgh's oldest and most atmospheric pubs, which serve good, informal meals.

Checkpoint

$ | INTERNATIONAL | Originally run as a pop-up during the Festival Fringe, this supercool café-bar is now a permanent part of the Edinburgh dining scene. The coffee is sensational, but the comfort food is just as much of a draw. Known for: excellent coffee and hearty breakfasts; delicious light lunches; hip hangout in the evening. ☎ Average main: £8 ☒ 3 Bristo Pl., Old Town ☎ 0131/225-9352 🌐 www.checkpointedinburgh.com.

★ Cannonball Restaurant

$$$ | ITALIAN | The name refers to one of the most delightful quirks of Edinburgh's Old Town—the cannonball embedded in the wall outside, said to have been fired at the castle while Bonnie Prince Charlie was in residence (not true, but a good story). The atmosphere in this three-story restaurant and whisky bar is casual and relaxed, despite the gorgeous art deco dining room with views of the castle esplanade. Known for: scrumptious Italian-Scottish cuisine; great views of the castle; bread-crumbed haggis cannonballs. ☎ Average main: £18 ☒ 356 Castlehill, Old Town ☎ 0131/225-1550 🌐 www.contini.com/cannonball.

David Bann

$ | VEGETARIAN | This hip eatery, situated just off the Royal Mile, serves exclusively vegetarian and vegan favorites, and its inventive dishes and modern interior make it a popular place with young locals. The menu changes constantly, but the invariably creative, flavorful dishes often leave carnivores forgetting they're eating vegetarian. Known for: superb vegetarian and vegan cuisine; very affordable; lovely setting. ☎ Average main: £13 ☒ 56-58 St. Mary's St., Old Town ☎ 0131/556-5888 🌐 www.davidbann.com.

Hanam's

$ | MIDDLE EASTERN | Kurdish food may not be as well known as other Middle Eastern cuisines, but dishes like bay-engan surocau (marinated slow-roasted eggplant) and lamb tashreeb (a flavorful casserole) are worth checking out. Hanam's proudly promotes Kurdish cuisine, but also serves more familiar and equally delicious Middle Eastern fare, from shish kebabs to falafel. Known for: traditional Kurdish cooking; BYOB policy; hookah on heated terrace. ☎ Average main: £14 ☒ 3 Johnston Terr., Old Town ☎ 0131/225-1329 🌐 www.hanams.com.

Howies

$ | BRITISH | The Victoria Street branch of this bistro chain is a good choice for contemporary Scottish fare, with lots of fresh local produce. Alongside the daily specials and quality Scottish steaks and salmon, there are some nicely inventive vegetarian options. Known for: quality Scottish menu; good value set-price lunch; can get very busy. ☎ Average main: £14 ☒ 10-14 Victoria St., Old Town ☎ 0131/225-1721 🌐 www.howies.uk.com.

La Garrigue

$$$ | FRENCH | Edinburgh is blessed with several excellent French bistros, and this is one of the best. Although the modern decor evokes Paris, the food has the rustic flavor of the southern Languedoc region. Known for: rustic French cuisine; attentive service; colorful crockery. ☎ Average main: £22 ☒ 31 Jeffrey St., Old Town ☎ 0131/557-3032 🌐 www.lagarrigue.co.uk.

★ Lovecrumbs

$ | CAFÉ | A bakery-café with an inordinately sweet tooth, Lovecrumbs joyously, deliciously, and unashamedly focuses on what really matters in life: cake. It serves delectable confections of all kinds, from sumptuous Victoria sponges to heavenly peanut-butter brownies to mouthwatering lemon tarts. Known for: extraordinary cakes galore; junk-shop-esque decor;

large crowds despite unpredictable opening times. ☎ Average main: £4 ☒ 155 W. Port, Old Town ☎ 0131/629-0626 🌐 www.lovecrumbs.co.uk.

Michael Neave Kitchen and Whisky Bar

$$$ | MODERN BRITISH | Young chef Michael Neave delivers exceptional cuisine at affordable prices in his restaurant just off the Royal Mile. With a mission to “explore the best of Scotland's larder,” quality Scottish produce is the star here, with meaty mains like Aberdeen Angus steaks, Perthshire venison, and Borders lamb appearing alongside Scottish seafood specialties like lobster and sea bream. Known for: superb Scottish cuisine; inventive sauces; great-value fixed-price menus. ☎ Average main: £19 ☒ 21 Old Fishmarket Cl., Old Town ☎ 0131/226-4747 🌐 www.michaelneave.co.uk ☺ Closed Sun. and Mon.

★ Oink

$ | BRITISH | For a quick, cheap bite while wandering the Royal Mile, you can't beat Oink—possibly the best hog roast (pulled pork) in Edinburgh. Located at the bottom of the Royal Mile (there are two other outlets, but this one is the best), it was founded by two farmers in 2008, and their high-quality, hand-reared pork has proved a huge hit ever since. Known for: unbelievable pulled pork; extra crackling on request; great-value lunch. ☎ Average main: £6 ☒ 82 Canongate, Old Town ☎ 07584/637416 🌐 www.oink-hogroast.co.uk.

Online

$$$ | SEAFOOD | This fabulous seafood restaurant just off the Royal Mile makes waves with its expertly prepared dishes from sustainable fishing sources. The menu is populated with Scottish seafood staples, from salmon and sea bream to lobster and langoustines, but these are often served in interesting and surprising ways. Known for: spectacular seafood; lavish decor; reservations usually needed for nights and weekends. ☎ Average main: £25 ☒ 2 George IV Bridge, Old Town ☎ 0131/226-1888 🌐 www.ondinerestaurant.co.uk ☺ Closed Sun.

★ Timberyard

$$$ | BRITISH | There are few restaurants that feel so wonderfully, well, Edinburgh as this one. The freshest seasonal ingredients, mostly sourced from small local producers, go into creating delicious, inventive fare. Known for: exciting dishes; hip interior; pricey multicourse menus. ☎ Average main: £15 ☒ 10 Lady Lawson St., Old Town ☎ 0131/221-1222 🌐 www.timberyard.co ☺ Closed Sun. and Mon.

★ Wedgwood the Restaurant

$$$ | MODERN BRITISH | Rejecting the idea that fine dining should be a stuffy affair, owners Paul Wedgwood and Lisa Chanon are in charge at this Royal Mile gem. Local produce and some unusual foraged fronds enliven the taste buds as Scottish and international influences are creatively fused together, from the starters (like the satisfyingly salty Scottish “miso” soup) to the desserts (such as the malt and whisky panna cotta). Known for: unfussy fine dining; delicious wild foraged salad; good three-course lunch deal. ☎ Average main: £22 ☒ 267 Canongate, Old Town ☎ 0131/558-8737 🌐 www.wedgwood-therestaurant.co.uk.

Hotels

The narrow pends (alleys), cobbled streets, and steep hills of the Old Town remind you that this is a city with many layers of history. From medieval to modernist, these hotels all are within a stone's throw of the action.

Radisson Collection Royal Mile Edinburgh

$$$ | HOTEL | The bright primary colors, striking stenciled wallpapers, and bold, eclectic furnishings inside this über-trendy design hotel contrast with the Gothic surroundings of the Royal Mile—and yet, somehow, it works. Pros: perfect location in the heart of the city; bold and fashionable decor; complimentary gin-and-tonic on arrival. Cons: decor a little Austin Powers in places; expensive during high season; street noise can leak into rooms. Rooms from: £240 1 George IV Bridge, Old Town ☎ 0131/220-6666 www.radissonhotels.com/en-us/hotels/radisson-collection-edinburgh-royal-mile ➡ 136 rooms Free Breakfast.

★ Hotel du Vin

$$$ | HOTEL | Leave it to one of the United Kingdom's most forward-thinking hotel chains to convert a Victorian-era asylum into this understated luxury property, which combines a real sense of history with contemporary decor and trappings. Pros: unique and historic building; trendy design; lively on-site dining and drinking. Cons: quarter-mile walk to nearest parking; neighborhood can be noisy; service can be hit-and-miss. Rooms from: £200 11 Bristo Pl., Old Town ☎ 0131/285-1479 www.hotelduvin.com ➡ 47 rooms Free Breakfast.

The Inn on the Mile

$$$ | B&B/INN | This chic and welcoming boutique inn could hardly be more central—some rooms even overlook the Royal Mile. Pros: views of the Royal Mile; excellent on-site bar; great design. Cons: lots of steps and no elevator; sometimes noisy; nearest parking at a public lot (three-minute walk). Rooms from: £210 82 High St., Old Town ☎ 0131/556-9940 www.theinnonthemile.co.uk ➡ 9 rooms Free Breakfast.

The Scotsman

$$$ | HOTEL | This magnificent turn-of-the-20th-century building, with its grand marble staircase and its fascinating history—it was once the headquarters of the Scotsman newspaper—now houses this modern luxury hotel. Pros: gorgeous surroundings; personalized service; ideal Old Town location. Cons: no air-conditioning; spa can be noisy; could do with some renovation. Rooms from: £270 20 N. Bridge, Old Town ☎ 0131/556-5565 scotsmanhotel.co.uk ➡ 69 rooms Free Breakfast.

The Witchery by the Castle

$$$$ | HOTEL | Each suite within this lavishly theatrical lodging has a theme—choices include the Library, the Guardroom, and the Turret—and is appointed with grand antiques, champagne chilling in an immense bucket, and the finest-quality bedding. Pros: Gothic drama and intriguing antiques; a truly romantic retreat; sumptuous dining. Cons: can be noisy at night; decor not for everybody; pricey. Rooms from: £395 352 Castlehill, Old Town ☎ 0131/225-5613 www.thewitchery.com ➡ 9 suites Free Breakfast.

Nightlife

BARS AND PUBS

The Canons' Gait

BARS/PUBS | In addition to a fine selection of local real ales and malts, The Canons' Gait has live jazz and blues performances, as well as edgy comedy shows in the cellar bar. 232 Canongate, Old Town ☎ 0131/556-4481 www.gait.bar.

★ The Holyrood 9A

BARS/PUBS | This warm, wood-paneled hipster hangout has a fine array of craft beers on tap, as well as an impressive whisky collection. It also serves some of Edinburgh's best gourmet burgers. 9A Holyrood Rd., Old Town ☎ 0131/556-5044 www.theholyrood.co.uk.

The Last Drop

BARS/PUBS | There's plenty of atmosphere (and plenty of tourists) amid the nooks and crannies at The Last Drop. The name has a grim double meaning, as it was once the site of public hangings. 74-78 Grassmarket, Old Town ☎ 0131/225-4851 www.nicholsonspubs.co.uk/res-taurants/scotlandandnorthernireland/thelastdropgrassmarketedinburgh.

The Three Sisters

BARS/PUBS | This pub is a hive of activity during festival season, when the courtyard transforms into a beer garden with food stalls, and is packed wall-to-wall with revelers until the wee hours. Outside of the summer months, it remains a lively local favorite and the best place to watch live sports in Edinburgh. 139 Cowgate, Old Town ☎ 0131/622-6802 www.thethreesistersbar.co.uk.

Under the Stairs

BARS/PUBS | As the name suggests, this shabby-chic cocktail bar-cum-bistro is tucked away below street level. A cozy, low-ceilinged place, full of quirky furniture and hip art exhibits, Under the Stairs serves specialty, seasonal cocktails, as well as superb bar food, to a mostly young crowd. 3A Merchant St., Old Town ☎ 0131/466-8550 www.underthestairs.org.

★ Whisky Rooms

BARS/PUBS | This venerable establishment offers one of Old Town's most enjoyable whisky tastings: an informative and interactive experience with an expert guide. The 90-minute Premium Whisky Tasting features five unusual drams you'll almost certainly not have tasted before. When you're finished, either browse the shop stacked high with tempting bottles or head into the bar for another dram. 4-7 N. Bank St., Old Town ☎ 0131/225-7224 www.whiskirooms.co.uk.

LIVE MUSIC

You can still find folk and jazz musicians performing in pubs and clubs throughout the Old Town.

★ The Jazz Bar

MUSIC CLUBS | This basement music venue delivers exactly what the name promises: jazz, in all its many weird and wonderful forms. Blues, funk, acoustic, electric—there's something new to discover every night of the week. There's usually a small cover charge (cash only), but this all goes to musicians, not the venue. 1A Chambers St., Old Town ☎ 0131/220-4298 www.thejazzbar.co.uk.

The Royal Oak

MUSIC CLUBS | With a piano in the corner, this cozy, friendly pub presents excellent live blues and folk music most nights—usually with no cover charge. 1 Infirmary St., Old Town ☎ 0131/557-2976 www.royal-oak-folk.com.

Whistle Binkies Live Music Bar

MUSIC CLUBS | This atmospheric North Bridge bar, accessible from Niddry Street (as it's in the bridge), presents rock, blues, and folk music every night of the week, with as many as six or seven acts on Saturday nights. 4-6 South Bridge, Old Town ☎ 0131/557-5114 whistlebinkies.com.

NIGHTCLUBS

Cabaret Voltaire

DANCE CLUBS | The vaulted ceilings of this subterranean club reverberate with dance music most nights, with an ever-changing lineup of cutting-edge DJs on the decks. The club also hosts regular live gigs and, during the Fringe, stand-up comedy shows. 36-38 Blair St., Old Town ☎ 0131/247-4704 www.thecabaretvoltaire.com.

Performing Arts

Festival Theatre

MUSIC | This theater hosts regular concerts, as well as musical theater and Scottish Opera productions. 13-29 Nicolson St., Old Town ☎ 0131/529-6000 www.capitaltheatres.com.

The Queen's Hall

MUSIC | This intimate venue hosts a range of music events, from indie and rock concerts to jazz and classical music recitals. 85-89 Clerk St., Old Town ☎ 0131/668-2019 www.thequeenshall.net.

Shopping

BOOKS AND STATIONERY

Armchair Books

BOOKS/STATIONERY | Just a two-minute walk from Grassmarket, Armchair Books

Hogmanay: Hello, New Year

In Scotland New Year's Eve is called Hogmanay. Around Scotland celebrations continue the next day with customs such as "first-footing"—visiting your neighbors with gifts that include whisky, all with the purpose of bringing good fortune. It's so important that January 2 as well as January 1 is a holiday in Scotland, while the rest of the United Kingdom trudges back to work.

What to Expect

Edinburgh's Hogmanay celebrations extend over several days, with music, dance, and theater performances taking place throughout the city. The lineup changes every year, but always includes a number of free events. Festivities featuring fire add a dramatic motif; buildings may open for rare night tours; a ceilidh has everyone dancing outdoors to traditional music; and family concerts and serious discussions during the day round out the agenda. At the heart of Hogmanay, though, is the evening street party on New Year's Eve, with different music stages, food and drink (and people do drink), and the cockle-warming sight of glowing fireworks over Edinburgh Castle. And it all ends with communal renditions of "Auld Lang Syne," written by Scotland's own Robert Burns.

Planning Basics

Besides the £30 you'll pay to get into the street party celebrations, expect to shell out extra for some related events. For example, the torchlight procession on December 30 costs around £15, while the big-name concert in the Princes Street Gardens on 30 will run you a wallet-punching £70. Book rooms as far ahead as possible. Obvious but essential is warmth: superfluffy hats and the bundled-up look are de rigueur. Check out www.edinburghshogmanay.com for full details.

CLOTHING

Bill Baber

CLOTHING | One of the more imaginative Scottish knitwear designers, Bill Baber's creative and colorful pieces are a long way from the conservative pastel woolies sold at some of the large mill shops. 66 Grassmarket, Old Town ☎ 0131/225-3249 www.billbaber.com.

Ragamuffin

CLOTHING | First established on the Isle of Skye, Ragamuffin's Edinburgh outlet sells some of the funkiest, brightest, and most elegant knitwear produced anywhere in Scotland. 278 Canongate, Old Town ☎ 0131/557-6007.

is a chaotic but characterful bookshop heaving with secondhand and antiquarian books. 72-74 W. Port, Old Town ☎ 0131/229-5927 www.armchairbooks.co.uk.

Carson Clark Gallery

BOOKS/STATIONERY | This gallery specializes in antique maps, sea charts, and prints. 34 Northumberland St., Old Town ☎ 0131/556-4710.

Main Point Books

BOOKS/STATIONERY | This bibliophile's haven is stacked high with obscure first editions and bargain tomes. It also hosts regular literary events. 77 Bread St., Old Town ☎ 0131/228-4837 www.mainpointbooks.co.uk.

GIFTS AND ACCESSORIES

Hannah Zakari

GIFTS/SOUVENIRS | Quirky handmade pieces, including embroidered cushions, are a specialty at Hannah Zakari. Keep an eye out for unusual jewelry, artwork, and accessories, too. 43 Candlemaker Row, Old Town ☎ 0131/226-5433 www.hannahzakari.co.uk.

JEWELRY

Clarksons of Edinburgh

JEWELRY/ACCESSORIES | A family firm, Clarksons handcrafts a unique collection of jewelry, from Celtic to contemporary styles. The pieces here are made with silver, gold, platinum, and precious gems, with a particular emphasis on diamonds. 87 W. Bow, Old Town ☎ 0131/225-8141 www.clarksonsedinburgh.co.uk.

SCOTTISH SPECIALTIES

★ Cadenhead's Whisky Shop

WINE/SPIRITS | Edinburgh's most iconic Scotch shop, Cadenhead's has an incredible selection of whisky to purchase (including rare bottles from closed distilleries), and also offers tasting sessions. The friendly and knowledgeable staff can help you pick out the perfect whisky to suit your palate. 172 Canongate, Old Town ☎ 0131/556-5864 www.cadenhead.scot.

★ Cranachan & Crowdie

FOOD/CANDY | This lovely gourmet shop on the Royal Mile is brimming with the finest Scottish food and drink, from crunchy oatcakes to melt-in-the-mouth shortbread. There's even a chocolate counter for those with a particularly sweet tooth. Staff are happy to put together hampers of food for any occasion—including an impromptu picnic back in your room. They also sell tweeds, handmade candles, and other gift-worthy knickknacks. 263 Canongate, Old Town ☎ 0131/556-7194 www.cranachanandcrowdie.com.

Geoffrey Tailor Kiltmakers

LOCAL SPECIALTIES | This shop can clothe you in full Highland dress, with high-quality kilts made in its own workshops. 57-59 High St., Old Town ☎ 0131/557-0256 www.geoffreykilts.co.uk.

New Town

It was not until the Scottish Enlightenment, a civilizing time of expansion in the 1700s, that the city's elite decided to break away from the Royal Mile's craggy slope and narrow closes to create a new neighborhood below the castle. This was to become the New Town, with elegant squares, classical facades, wide streets, and harmonious proportions. Clearly, change had to come. At the dawn of the 18th century, Edinburgh's unsanitary conditions—primarily a result of overcrowded living quarters—were becoming notorious. The well-known Scottish fiddle tune "The Flooers (flowers) of Edinburgh" was only one of many ironic references to the capital's unpleasant environment.

To help remedy this sorry state of affairs, in 1767 James Drummond, the city's lord provost (the Scottish term for mayor), urged the town council to hold a competition to design a new district for Edinburgh. The winner was an unknown young architect named James Craig (1744-95). His plan called for a grid of three main east-west streets, balanced at either end by two grand squares. These streets survive today, though some of the buildings that line them have been altered by later development. Princes Street is the southernmost, with Queen Street to the north and George Street as the axis, punctuated by St. Andrew and Charlotte squares. A look at the map will reveal a geometric symmetry unusual in Britain. Even the Princes Street Gardens are balanced by the Queen Street Gardens, to the north. Princes Street was conceived as an exclusive residential address, with an open vista facing the castle. It has since been altered by the demands of business and shopping, but the vista remains.

The New Town was expanded several times after Craig's death and now covers an area about three times larger than Craig envisioned. Indeed, some of the most elegant facades came later and can be found by strolling north of the Queen Street Gardens.

Sights

Calton Hill

VIEWPOINT | Robert Louis Stevenson's favorite view of his beloved city was from the top of this hill, and it's easy to see why. Located in the heart of the city, Calton Hill offers stunning vistas of the Old and New Towns and out to the Firth of Forth, making it a popular setting for picnicking and watching festival fireworks. Great views aside, the hill is also home to a number of impressive monuments. The most notable is the so-called National Monument, also known as "Scotland's Disgrace," which was commissioned in 1822 and intended to mimic Athens's Parthenon. But after just 12 columns had been built, the money ran out, leaving the facade as a monument to high aspirations and poor fundraising. Nearby, the 100-foot-high Nelson Monument, completed in 1815 in honor of Britain's greatest naval hero, is topped with a "time ball" that is dropped at 1 pm every day. Other hillside monuments honor notable Scots ranging from mathematician John Playfair to philosopher Dugald Stewart.

The hill is also home to the City Observatory, which hosts regular contemporary art exhibitions, as well as upmarket restaurant The Lookout by Gardener's Cottage. It also plays host to the Beltane Fire Festival every April 30.  Bounded by Leith St. to the west and Regent Rd. to the south, New Town ☎ 0131/529-5151  www.edinburgh.gov.uk  Nelson Monument £6.

George Street

NEIGHBORHOOD | With its high-end shops, upmarket bistros, and five-star hotels, all with handsome Georgian frontages, George Street is a more pleasant, less crowded thoroughfare for strolling than Princes Street. It also has a couple of points of interest. First, there's the statue of King George IV, at the intersection of George and Hanover streets, which recalls the visit of George IV to Scotland in 1822; he was the first British monarch to do so since King Charles II in the 17th century. Next, the Assembly Rooms, between Hanover and Frederick streets, are where Sir Walter Scott officially acknowledged having written the Waverley novels (the author had hitherto been a mystery, albeit a badly kept one). It's now a popular venue during the Fringe Festival.  Between Charlotte Sq. and St. Andrew Sq., New Town.

Moray Place

PLAZA | With its "pendants" of Ainslie Place and Randolph Crescent, Moray Place was laid out in 1822 by the Earl of Moray. From the start the homes were planned to be of particularly high quality, with lovely curving facades, imposing porticos, and a central secluded garden reserved for residents.  Between Charlotte Sq. and Water of Leith, New Town.

Princes Street

NEIGHBORHOOD | The south side of this dominant New Town street is occupied by the well-kept Princes Street Gardens, which act as a wide green moat to the castle on its rock. The north side is now one long sequence of chain stores with mostly unappealing modern fronts, with one or two exceptions: most notably the handsome Victorian facade that is home to Jenners department store.  Waterloo Pl. to Lothian Rd., New Town.

★ Royal Botanic Garden Edinburgh

GARDEN | FAMILY | Explore Britain's largest rhododendron and azalea gardens at this beautiful 70-acre botanical garden. Founded in 1670 as a physic garden, it now has a range of natural highlights such as soaring palms in the glass-domed Temperate House and the steamy Tropical Palm House, an extensive Chinese garden, and a pretty rock garden and stream. There's a visitor center with exhibits on biodiversity, a fabulous gift shop selling plants, books, and gifts, and two cafeterias. The handsome 18th-century Inverleith House hosts art exhibitions.

It's free to roam the gardens, though it costs extra for greenhouse admission, and you can splash out even more for guided garden walks and private tours. It takes 20 minutes to walk to the garden from Princes Street, or you can take a bus.  Arboretum Pl., Inverleith ☎ 0131/248-2909  www.rbge.org.uk  Free; Glasshouses £7.

Scott Monument

MEMORIAL | What appears to be a Gothic cathedral spire that's been chopped off and planted on Princes Street is in fact Scotland's tribute to one of its most famous sons, Sir Walter Scott. Built in 1844 and soaring to 200 feet, it remains the largest monument to a writer anywhere in the world. Climb the 287 steps to the top for a stunning view of the city and the hills and coast beyond.  E. Princes St. Gardens, New Town ☎ 0131/529-4068  www.edinburghmuseums.org.uk  £8; cash only.

★ Scottish National Gallery

MUSEUM | Opened to the public in 1859, the Scottish National Gallery presents a wide selection of paintings from the Renaissance to the postimpressionist period within a grand neoclassical building. Most famous are the old-master paintings bequeathed by the Duke of Sutherland, including Titian's Three Ages of Man. Many masters are here: works by Velázquez, El Greco, Rembrandt, Goya, Poussin, Turner, Degas, Monet, and van Gogh, among others, complement a fine collection of Scottish art, including Sir Henry Raeburn's Reverend Robert

Walker Skating on Duddingston Loch and other works by Ramsay, Raeburn, and Wilkie. The gallery also has an information center, a quirky gift shop, and the excellent Scottish Cafe and Restaurant.

You can also hop on a shuttle bus (£1 donation requested) from here to the Scottish National Gallery of Modern Art, which has paintings and sculptures by Pablo Picasso, Georges Braque, Henri Matisse, and André Derain, among others.  The Mound, New Town ☎ 0131/624-6200  www.nationalgalleries.org.

Scottish National Portrait Gallery

MUSEUM | Set within a magnificent red-sandstone Gothic building from 1889, this gallery is an Edinburgh must-see. Conceived as a gift to the people of Scotland, it divides into five broad themes, from Reformation to Modernity, with special galleries for photography and contemporary art—all centered around the stunning Great Hall. It also plays host to regular temporary exhibitions, including the annual BP Portrait Award.  1 Queen St., New Town ☎ 0131/624-6200  www.nationalgalleries.org.

Restaurants

The New Town, with its striking street plan, ambitious architecture, and professional crowd, has restaurants where you can get everything from a quick snack to a more formal dinner.

Contini George Street

$$ | ITALIAN | Set within a grand former banking hall on George Street, this superb restaurant serves light but satisfying Italian favorites divided into primi, secondi, and formaggi, all within a light, airy setting of grand Corinthian columns, an open marble-topped bar, intricate wall hangings, and soft gray banquettes. The food choices are strictly seasonal, but regularly appearing favorites include the Scotch beef carpaccio and the homemade ravioli with

Ancestor Hunting

Are you a Cameron or a Campbell, a Mackenzie or a Macdonald? If so, you may be one of the approximately 40 million people of Scottish descent around the world. It was the Highland clearances of the 18th and 19th centuries, in which tenant farmers were driven from their homes and replaced with sheep, that started the mass emigration to North America and Australia. Before or during a trip, you can do a little genealogical research or pursue your family tree more seriously.

VisitScotland (🌐 www.visitscotland.com/about/ancestry) has information about clans and surnames, books, and family-history societies. At the Register House, the ScotlandsPeople Centre (🌐 www.scotlandspeople.gov.uk) is the place to dip into the past or conduct in-depth genealogical research.

Willing to pay for help? Companies such as Scottish Ancestral Trail (🌐 www.scottish-ancestral-trail.co.uk) do the research and plan a trip around your family history. Throughout Scotland, you can check bookstores for information and visit clan museums and societies.

ricotta and spinach. Known for: lovely, light Italian cuisine; grand but relaxed setting; Scotch beef carpaccio. (📍) Average main: £18 ☒ 103 George St., New Town ☎ 0131/225-1550 🌐 www.contini.com/contini-george-street.

Dishoom

📍 | INDIAN | The city's most inventive Indian restaurant, Dishoom serves up an all-sensory experience, from the smells that greet you (delicious whiffs of incense mixed with aromatic spices) to the sight and sounds of the interior (the decor is all distressed-wood panels and chandeliers, inspired by Bombay's 1920 Iranian cafés) to the taste of the food itself. A tapas-style menu of deliciously tender meat, seafood, and vegetarian dishes welcomes you, along with delicious desserts. Known for: incredible lamb salli boti; great cocktail and mocktail menu; unique Indian breakfast rolls. (📍) Average main: £9 ☒ 3a St. Andrew Sq., Edinburgh ☎ 0131/2026-406 🌐 www.dishoom.com.

Dusit

📍 | THAI | Tucked down narrow Thistle Street, Dusit doesn't register on most travelers' radars, but it has been a local favorite since 2002. An authentic, contemporary Thai restaurant run by Bangkok-born Pom, the menu here delights with deliciously creamy curries, spicy stir-fries, and fragrant seafood specialties, all of which use a mix of fresh local produce and imported Thai vegetables. Known for: award-winning Thai food; local haunt; good value lunch menu. (📍) Average main: £17 ☒ 49a Thistle St., New Town ☎ 0131/220-6846 🌐 www.dusit.co.uk.

Fhior

$$$$ | BRITISH | A relative newcomer to Edinburgh's dining scene, Fhior seems here to stay. Owner and chef Scott Smith, who previously ran the award-winning Norn, serves up seasonal, Scandinavian-inspired fare with rare Scottish ingredients, from beremeal (an ancient form of barley) bread to sea buckthorn. Known for: modernist decor; old-school Scottish dishes with a Scandinavian flair; multicourse menu options chosen by the chef. (📍) Average main: £40 ☒ 36 Broughton St., Edinburgh ☎ 0131/477-5000 🌐 www.fhior.com ☺ Closed Sun.–Tues.

Grazing by Mark Greenaway

$$$ | BRITISH | Despite the name and the smattering of shared plates on offer, Grazing is mostly about traditional, hearty bistro fare done brilliantly. Set within a lavish yet unstuffy dining room, the restaurant's menu of seasonal dishes with inventive twists adds a real sense of fun to this consistently excellent, if surprisingly high-priced, dining experience. Known for: fun and inventive dishes; attentive service; menu prices that tend to add up. (📍) Average main: £25 ☒ Waldorf Astoria Edinburgh—The Caledonian, Princes St., New Town ☎ 0131/222-8857 🌐 www.markgreenaway.com.

★ The Honours

$$$ | BISTRO | Run by Edinburgh restaurant grandee Martin Wishart, the Honours is a more relaxed (though almost as pricey) alternative to his eponymous flagship in Leith. Inside its gorgeous black-and-white, art deco interior, diners can enjoy a range of excellent Scottish seafood dishes; but those in the know order the meat, with extraordinary rare-breed sirloin and fillet beef steaks as well as delicious game like roe deer, guinea fowl, and rabbit. Known for: mouthwatering meat dishes; beautiful art deco decor; impeccable service. (📍) Average main: £25 ☒ 58a North Castle St., New Town ☎ 0131/220-2513 🌐 www.thehonours.co.uk ☺ Closed Sun. and Mon.

★ L'Escargot Bleu

📍 | FRENCH | When it comes to quality at a good value, this pretty little French bistro, situated on one of Edinburgh's trendiest streets, is almost impossible to beat. You're warmly welcomed into an upmarket but casual space of stripped wooden floors and period French posters, then shown a menu that seems to have a typo: £12.90 for a two-course lunch, or £14.90 for dinner of fine French cuisine as authentic as a withering stare on the Champs-Élysées. Known for: authentic French fare; hard-to-believe low prices; friendly service. (📍) Average main: £13 ☒ 56 Broughton St., New Town ☎ 0131/557-1600 🌐 www.lescargotbleu.co.uk ☺ Closed Sun.

Number One

$$$$ | BRITISH | Clublike but unstuffy, this outstanding basement restaurant, set within the Edwardian splendor of The Balmoral hotel, is made for intimate dining. The food is extraordinary, with a menu that highlights the best of Scottish seafood and meat in inventive fashion, but the prices make this a place for serious special occasions; the regular three-course prix-fixe is £90 per person (drinks not included) while the tasting menus will set you back even more. Known for: wonderfully intimate setting; inventive dishes; very expensive. (📍) Average main: £90 ☒ The Balmoral, 1 Princes St., New Town ☎ 0131/557-6727 🌐 www.rococofothotels.com ☺ No lunch.

★ The Pompadour

$$$$ | FRENCH FUSION | Sophisticated surroundings, spectacular views, and sumptuous cuisine make this restaurant, originally opened in 1925, one of Edinburgh's best spots for fine dining. Head chef Dan Ashmore uses his expertise in great Scottish produce, from venison to sea trout, to serve up a stunning, "mystery" seven-course tasting menu (it comes in a sealed envelope; it's up to you when, or if, you want to take a peek). Known for: beautiful pastel-floral dining room; subtly sumptuous flavors; gorgeous presentation. (📍) Average main: £35 ☒ Waldorf Astoria Edinburgh—The Caledonian, Princes St., New Town ☎ 0131/222-8857 🌐 www.thepompadour.com ☺ Closed Mon. and Tues.

21212

$$$$ | MODERN FRENCH | Paul Kitching is one of Britain's most innovative chefs, and the theatrical dining experience at 21212 delivers surprises galore. Set within a Georgian town house, the Michelin-starred restaurant is sumptuously appointed while, behind a large glass screen, a small army of chefs is busy assembling the delicious and intricate dishes. Known for: contemporary Franco-Anglo-Scottish cuisine; atmospheric and romantic; enigmatic menu of two starts, two mains, and two desserts with soup and cheese courses in between. £ Average main: £85 ☎ 3 Royal Terr., New Town ☎ 0131/523-1030 🌐 www.21212restaurant.co.uk 🕒 Closed Sun.–Tues.

Hotels

Calton Hill, which offers some of the best views of the city from its summit, is just one of the reasons to base yourself in the New Town, filled with gorgeous 18th- and 19th-century architecture.

★ The Balmoral

$$$$ | HOTEL | The attention to detail in the elegantly appointed rooms and suites, where colors and patterns echo the country's heathers and moors, and the sheer Edwardian splendor of this grand, former railroad hotel make staying at The Balmoral a special introduction to Edinburgh. Pros: big and beautiful Edwardian building; top-hatted doorman; top-notch spa, restaurant, and whisky bar. Cons: small lap pool; spa books up fast; some rooms a little tiny. £ Rooms from: £340 ☎ 1 Princes St., New Town ☎ 0131/556-2414 🌐 www.rocfortehotels.com 🛏 188 rooms 🕒 Free Breakfast.

Braid Apartments

$$ | RENTAL | This collection of chic, comfortable, and spacious self-service apartments is tucked away on quiet Thistle Street, meaning that guests can enjoy being in the heart of the New Town and yet out of sight (and sound) of the crowds. Pros: good modern facilities; quiet central location; friendly reception staff. Cons: no on-site parking; noisy water pumps; no access for people with disabilities. £ Rooms from: £175 ☎ 27 Thistle St., New Town ☎ 0800/304-7160 🌐 www.bymansley.com 🛏 20 rooms 🕒 No meals.

The Edinburgh Grand

$$ | RENTAL | Despite all appearances—the classical Edinburgh exterior, the Corinthian-columned art deco lobby, the friendly and attentive concierges, and the in-house high-end restaurants—The Edinburgh Grand is not a swanky hotel, but rather a collection of grand and luxurious serviced apartments. Pros: beautiful apartments with supercomfy beds; ideal location for trams and trains; all amenities included. Cons: perilously dark corridors; no doors on some bathrooms; Register Club food disappointing and overpriced. £ Rooms from: £200 ☎ 42 St. Andrew Sq., New Town ☎ 0131/230-0570 🌐 www.lateralcity.com 🛏 50 apartments 🕒 No meals.

★ The Glasshouse

$$ | HOTEL | Glass walls extend from the 19th-century facade of a former church, foreshadowing the daring, modern interior of one of the city's original, and best, boutique hotels. Pros: truly stunning rooftop garden; very modern and stylish; near all the attractions. Cons: loud air-conditioning and toilet flushing; decor a little sterile for some; continental breakfast extra (hot breakfast even more). £ Rooms from: £200 ☎ 2 Greenside Pl., New Town ☎ 0131/525-8200 🌐 www.theglasshousehotel.co.uk 🛏 77 rooms 🕒 No meals.

Inverleith Hotel

$ | B&B/INN | Across from the Royal Botanic Gardens, this renovated Victorian town house has cozy, well-lit rooms with velour bedspreads, dark-wood furniture, and pale-gold curtains—at an incredible value. Pros: quiet surroundings; knowledgeable staff; cheap parking nearby (free on weekends). Cons: some rooms are small; far from the Old Town; uphill walk to the city center. £ Rooms from: £80 ☎ 5 Inverleith Terr., New Town ☎ 0131/556-2745 🌐 www.inverleithhotel.co.uk 🛏 9 rooms 🕒 Free Breakfast.

InterContinental Edinburgh The George

$$ | HOTEL | Built in 1775 for Edinburgh's elite, this row of five Georgian town houses in the heart of the New Town now hosts a luxury hotel. Pros: excellent central location; stylish and comfortable rooms; fast Wi-Fi throughout. Cons: regular wedding parties in reception area; service can be hit-and-miss; not all rooms have air-conditioning. £ Rooms from: £200 ☎ 19–21 George St., New Town ☎ 0131/225-1251 🌐 www.ihg.com/intercontinental/hotels/gb/en/edinburgh/edigs/hoteldetail 🛏 240 rooms 🕒 Free Breakfast.

Waldorf Astoria Edinburgh—The Caledonian

$$$ | HOTEL | An imposing and ornate red-sandstone building situated at the west end of Princes Street Gardens, “The Caley” has dramatic Victorian decor, beautifully restored interiors, and more castle-view rooms than anywhere else—not to mention the best hotel dining in Edinburgh. Pros: impeccable service; not as pricey as some other grande dame hotels; outstanding restaurants. Cons: expensive parking (£25 per night); no wow factor for some; location a little away from the action. £ Rooms from: £250 ☎ Princes St., New Town ☎ 0131/222-8888 🌐 waldorfastoria3.hilton.com 🛏 241 rooms 🕒 Free Breakfast.

Nightlife

BARS AND PUBS

The Basement

BARS/PUBS | This funky, cheerful bar has something of the 1950s jet-setter vibe—which might explain its happy-go-lucky mash-up of cocktails, Mexican food, and Hawaiian-shirted bar staff. ☎ 10A–12A Broughton St., New Town ☎ 0131/557-0097 🌐 www.basement-bar-edinburgh.co.uk.

Bramble Bar

BARS/PUBS | This easily walked-by basement bar on Queen Street—take the stairs down to a clothing-alteration shop and you'll see a small sign—is one of Edinburgh's great hidden gems. Expect superb cocktails, eclectic music (DJs spin most nights), young crowds, and lots of nooks and crannies. ☎ 16A Queen St., New Town ☎ 0131/226-6343 🌐 www.bramblebar.co.uk.

★ Cafe Royal Circle Bar

BARS/PUBS | Famed for its atmospheric Victorian interiors—think ornate stucco, etched mirrors, tiled murals, stained glass, and leather booths—the Cafe Royal Circle Bar has been drawing a cast of Edinburgh characters since it opened in 1863. Regulars and newcomers alike pack in for the drinks (a host of real ales and malt whiskies) and tasty bar food—everything from yummy sandwiches and small plates to elaborate seafood platters. ☎ 19 W. Register St., New Town ☎ 0131/556-1884 🌐 www.caferoyaledinburgh.co.uk.

Cask and Barrel

BARS/PUBS | A spacious, traditional pub on trendy Broughton Street, the Cask and Barrel serves hand-pulled ales from a horseshoe-shaped bar, ringed by a collection of brewery mirrors. ☎ 115 Broughton St., New Town ☎ 0131/556-3132 🌐 www.caskandbarrelbroughton.co.uk.

★ Guildford Arms

BARS/PUBS | Like the Café Royal Circle Bar on the other corner of the same Victorian block, the Guildford Arms has a spectacular interior of intricate plasterwork, elaborate cornices, and wood paneling. The ornate ceiling alone is worth the visit. Stay for the range of excellent Scottish ales on tap. ☎ 1 W. Register St., New Town ☎ 0131/556-4312 🌐 www.guildfordarms.com.

Joseph Pearce's

BARS/PUBS | FAMILY | One of eight Swedish bars and restaurants in Edinburgh owned by the Boda group, Joseph Pearce's has a distinctly northern European feel, despite its solidly Edwardian origins. Scan-di-themed cocktails are popular here, as are the meatballs, open sandwiches, and other Swedish dishes. There's a children's corner with toys to keep the little ones occupied, and a sunny outdoor space in summer. ☒ 23 Elm Row, New Town ☎ 0131/556-4140 🌐 www.bodabar.com.

★ Juniper

BARS/PUBS | Situated right opposite Edinburgh Waverley Station, Juniper cultivates an air of glamorous fun, helped by its postcard-worthy views of the city and the castle. The wine list is good (if a little pricey), but it's the wildly imaginative cocktails that really make this place. A long-standing favorite is Strawberries and Steam, a strawberry-infused gin cocktail served in a teapot that's bubbling over with dry ice. You can soak up your drinks with nibbles from the modern Scottish "street food" menu. ☒ 20 Princes St., New Town ☎ 0131/652-7370 🌐 www.juniperedinburgh.co.uk.

Kay's Bar

BARS/PUBS | Housed in a former Georgian coach house, this diminutive but friendly spot serves 50 single-malt whiskies, a range of guest ales, and decent bottled beers. Check out the cute little wood-paneled library room, with its tiny fireplace and shelves full of books. ☒ 39 Jamaica St., New Town ☎ 0131/225-1858 🌐 www.kaysbar.co.uk.

★ Panda and Sons

BARS/PUBS | The very definition of a hidden gem, this Prohibition-style speakeasy is cunningly tucked away behind a barbershop exterior. Venture inside and downstairs to discover a quirky bar serving some seriously refined cocktails. And yes, we're baffled by the fictional bar-owning panda, too. ☒ 79 Queen St., New Town ☎ 0131/220-0443 🌐 www.pandaandsons.com.

Starbar

BARS/PUBS | Well worth seeking out, the tucked-away Starbar has a beer garden, table soccer, and—a rarity—a very good jukebox. It is also rumored to be haunted—get the owners to regale you with scary stories, including a specific clause in their lease that prevents them from removing a human skull from the building. ☒ 1 Northumberland Pl., New Town ☎ 0131/539-8070 🌐 www.starbar.co.uk.

Tonic

BARS/PUBS | This stylish basement bar has bouncy stools, comfy sofas, and a long list of superb cocktails. There's relaxing music Monday to Thursday, acoustic acts Friday, and resident DJs on the weekend. ☒ 34A N. Castle St., New Town ☎ 0131/225-6431 🌐 www.bar-tonic.co.uk.

COMEDY CLUBS

The Stand

COMEDY CLUBS | Laugh until your sides split at The Stand, a legendary basement comedy club that hosts both famous names and up-and-coming acts all throughout the year, though it's particularly popular during the Fringe. There's a free improv show every Sunday lunchtime. ☒ 5 York Pl., East End ☎ 0131/558-7272 🌐 www.thestand.co.uk.

LGBTQ BARS

There's an ever-expanding LGBTQ scene in Edinburgh, and the city has many predominantly gay clubs, bars, and cafés. Nevertheless, don't expect the scene to be quite as varied as in London, New York, or even Glasgow. The List and The Skinny have sections that focus on gay and lesbian venues.

CC Blooms

BARS/PUBS | Modern and colorful, CC Blooms is a club spread over two levels, playing a mix of musical styles and with regular cabaret nights. Open nightly, it's been a mainstay on the gay scene since the early '90s, and can now count several other gay-friendly bars and clubs as neighbors. ☒ 23-24 Greenside Pl., New Town ☎ 0131/556-9331 🌐 www.ccblooms.co.uk.

Regent Bar

BARS/PUBS | Billing itself as "the best real ale gay pub in Edinburgh," this popular drinking hole is warm, homey, and welcoming—and it's dog-friendly, too. As advertised, the real ales selection is great. ☒ 2 Montrose Terr., Abbeyhill ☎ 0131/661-8198 🌐 www.theregentbar.co.uk.

NIGHTCLUBS

The Liquid Room

DANCE CLUBS | Top indie bands and an eclectic mix of club nights (techno, hip-hop, and alternative, to name a few) have made the Liquid Room a favorite after-dark venue since 1997. ☒ 9C Victoria St., New Town ☎ 0131/225-2564 🌐 www.liquidroom.com.

Performing Arts

Edinburgh Playhouse

THEATER | Big-ticket concerts and musicals, along with the occasional ballet and opera production, are staged at the popular Playhouse, with its enormous 3,000-seat auditorium. ☒ 18-22 Greenside La., East End ☎ 0844/871-3014 🌐 www.atgtickets.com.

Shopping

ANTIQUES

★ Unicorn Antiques

ANTIQUES/COLLECTIBLES | This Victorian basement is crammed with fascinating antiques, including artworks, ornaments, silverware, and other such curios. ☒ 65 Dundas St., New Town ☎ 0131/556-7176 🌐 www.unicornantiques.co.uk.

CLOTHING

Concrete Wardrobe

CLOTHING | For an eclectic mix of quirky knitwear and accessories, dive into Concrete Wardrobe. You can also find vintage furnishings and other crafty items. ☒ 50a Broughton St., New Town ☎ 0131/558-7130.

Elaine's Vintage Clothing

CLOTHING | This wee boutique in trendy Stockbridge is crammed full of vintage threads for women and men. The finds span the 20th century, but most are from the '40s to the '70s. The friendly owner is happy to share her knowledge of the many elegant and quirky outfits on her rails. ☒ 55 St. Stephen St., New Town ☎ 0131/225-5783.

DEPARTMENT STORES

Harvey Nichols

DEPARTMENT STORES | Affectionately (and almost universally) known as Harvey Nicks, this high-style British fashion chain has its Scottish outpost on St. Andrew Square, carrying the store's chic, upscale style options. ☒ 30-34 St. Andrew Sq., New Town ☎ 0131/524-8388 🌐 www.harveynichols.com.

★ Jenners

DEPARTMENT STORES | Jenners, a long-standing Edinburgh landmark that is now part of the U.K.-wide House of Fraser chain, specializes in traditional china and glassware, as well as Scottish tweeds and tartans—though you'll find everything else you'd expect from a large department store, too. Its famous food hall, run by Valvona & Crolla, stocks traditional culinary delights including shortbread, marmalade, and honey. ☒ 48 Princes St., New Town ☎ 0343/909-2031 🌐 www.houseoffraser.co.uk.

John Lewis

DEPARTMENT STORES | John Lewis specializes in furnishings and household goods, but also stocks designer clothes. It's part of the Edinburgh St. James shopping complex, which is currently closed for extensive redevelopment (due to finish in 2020), but John Lewis remains open as usual with access from Leith Street. ☒ Edinburgh St. James, Leith St., New Town ☎ 0131/556-9121 🌐 www.johnlewis.com.

Marks & Spencer

DEPARTMENT STORES | Fairly priced, stylish clothes and accessories are on offer at Marks & Spencer. You can also buy quality food and household goods. ☎ 54 Princes St., New Town ☎ 0131-225-2301 🌐 www.marksandspencer.com.

JEWELRY

Hamilton & Inches

JEWELRY/ACCESSORIES | Established in 1866, this jeweler is worth visiting not only for its gold and silver pieces, but also for its late-Georgian interior. Designed by David Bryce in 1834, it's all columns and elaborate plasterwork. ☎ 87 George St., New Town ☎ 0131/225-4898 🌐 www.hamiltonandinches.com.

Joseph Bonnar

JEWELRY/ACCESSORIES | Tucked behind George Street, Joseph Bonnar stocks Scotland's largest collection of antique jewelry, including 19th-century agate jewels. ☎ 72 Thistle St., New Town ☎ 0131/226-2811 🌐 www.josephbonnar.com.

★ Sheila Fleet

JEWELRY/ACCESSORIES | As much art gallery as jewelry shop, designer Sheila Fleet's store in Stockbridge displays a variety of stunning jewelry inspired by her native Orkney, from wind and waves to Celtic spirals to island wildlife. ☎ 18 St. Stephen St., Stockbridge ☎ 0131/225-5939 🌐 www.sheilafleet.com.

OUTDOOR SPORTS GEAR

Cotswold Outdoor

SPORTING GOODS | This specialist chain store sells outdoor clothing for all weather, as well as accessories, maps, guides, and more. The staff are invariably helpful and informed. ☎ 72 Rose St., New Town ☎ 0131/341-2063 🌐 www.cotswoldoutdoor.com.

Haymarket

West of the Old Town and south of the West End is Haymarket, a district with its own down-to-earth character and well-worn charm. It offers varied shopping and dining options that become more upmarket as you head toward the West End and Leith.

🍴 Restaurants

This area has many restaurants that tend to be more affordable than those in the center of town.

First Coast

$$ | INTERNATIONAL | This laid-back bistro, just a few minutes from Haymarket Station, has a loyal following—and for good reason. Its multicultural menu has everything from Thai mango salads to Brazilian seafood stews to Korean rice cakes, as well as an unusually good selection of vegetarian options. Known for: great international fare; big on flavor; relaxing interior. 📍 Average main: £15 ☎ 97-101 Dalry Rd., Haymarket ☎ 0131/313-4404 🌐 www.first-coast.co.uk ☺ Closed Sun.

🏨 Hotels

Close to one of Edinburgh's two main train stations, Haymarket—beyond the west end of Princes Street—can make a good base for exploring the city.

★ The Dunstan House

$$ | HOTEL | Set within two Victorian town houses that sit across the road from one another, with each offering a selection of beautifully appointed rooms and suites, this hotel is one of Edinburgh's most luxurious boutique options. Pros: beautifully decorated; excellent food and service; quiet, residential area. Cons: no elevator (and stairs to climb); a 20-minute walk to Princes Street; some traffic noise from outside. 📍 Rooms from: £200 ☎ 4 W. Coates, Haymarket ☎ 0131/337-6169

🌐 www.thedunstanhouse.com 📍 35 rooms 🍴 Free Breakfast.

The Victorian Town House

$ | B&B/INN | This handsome B&B, situated in a quiet, leafy crescent but within walking distance of Princes Street, offers bright and spacious rooms with a quirky mix of Edwardian and modern furnishings. Pros: serene surroundings; gracious staff; beautiful Water of Leith at your doorstep. Cons: no parking nearby; a little way from the Old Town. 📍 Rooms from: £120 ☎ 14 Eglinton Terr., Haymarket ☎ 0131/337-7088 🌐 the-victorian-town-house.edinburgh-hotel.org 📍 3 rooms 🍴 Free Breakfast.

West End

Handsome Georgian town houses give this neighborhood a dignified feel. People head here for the small boutiques and cafés, as well as the wide range of cultural venues.

👁 Sight

Edinburgh Zoo

ZOO | FAMILY | Home to star attractions Tian Tian and Yang Guang, the United Kingdom's only two giant pandas, Edinburgh's Zoo hosts more than 1,000 animals over 80 acres. Don't miss the famous Penguin Parade, which takes place every afternoon (as long as the penguins are willing), or the ever-popular Koala Territory, where you can get up close to the zoo's four koalas—including joey Kalari, who was born in 2019. Discounted tickets are available online. ☎ Royal Zoological Society of Scotland, 134 Corstorphine Rd., Corstorphine ☎ 0131/334-9171 🌐 www.edinburghzoo.org.uk 📍 £19.95.

★ Dean Village

NEIGHBORHOOD | Founded as a milling community in the 12th century, this pretty residential area offers a pleasant respite from the noise and crowds of the city. Head down cobbled Bells Brae Street and you'll be met by a charming assortment of old mill buildings, stone bridges, and lush greenery, all lining the Water of Leith. Walk two minutes east for a dramatic view of an imposing, 19th-century viaduct (Dean Bridge) or a little farther west to visit the Scottish National Gallery of Modern Art. ☎ Dean Village, Dean Village 🌐 history.business.site.

★ Edinburg Gin Distillery

WINERY/DISTILLERY | Whisky may be Scotland's most famous spirit, but gin also has a long and storied history here and as any visit to an Edinburgh bar will tell you, it's currently all the rage. Edinburgh Gin is a small distillery and visitor center just off Princes Street, offering tours and tastings that give a fascinating insight into craft gin production. You'll see two copper stills, Flora and Caledonia, which helped kick-start the now award-winning operation, and are still used to make some of their experimental, small-batch gins. (Note that the main range, including the navy-strength Cannonball Gin and the coastal botanical-infused Seaside Gin, are now produced at a larger facility in Leith). Take a discovery tour (£10) or, if you'd like a tasting too, a connoisseur tour (£25), then head into the Heads & Tales bar to sample some Scottish gin cocktails. ☎ 1a Rutland Pl., West End ☎ 0131/656-2810 🌐 www.edinburghgin.com 📍 £10.

🍴 Restaurants

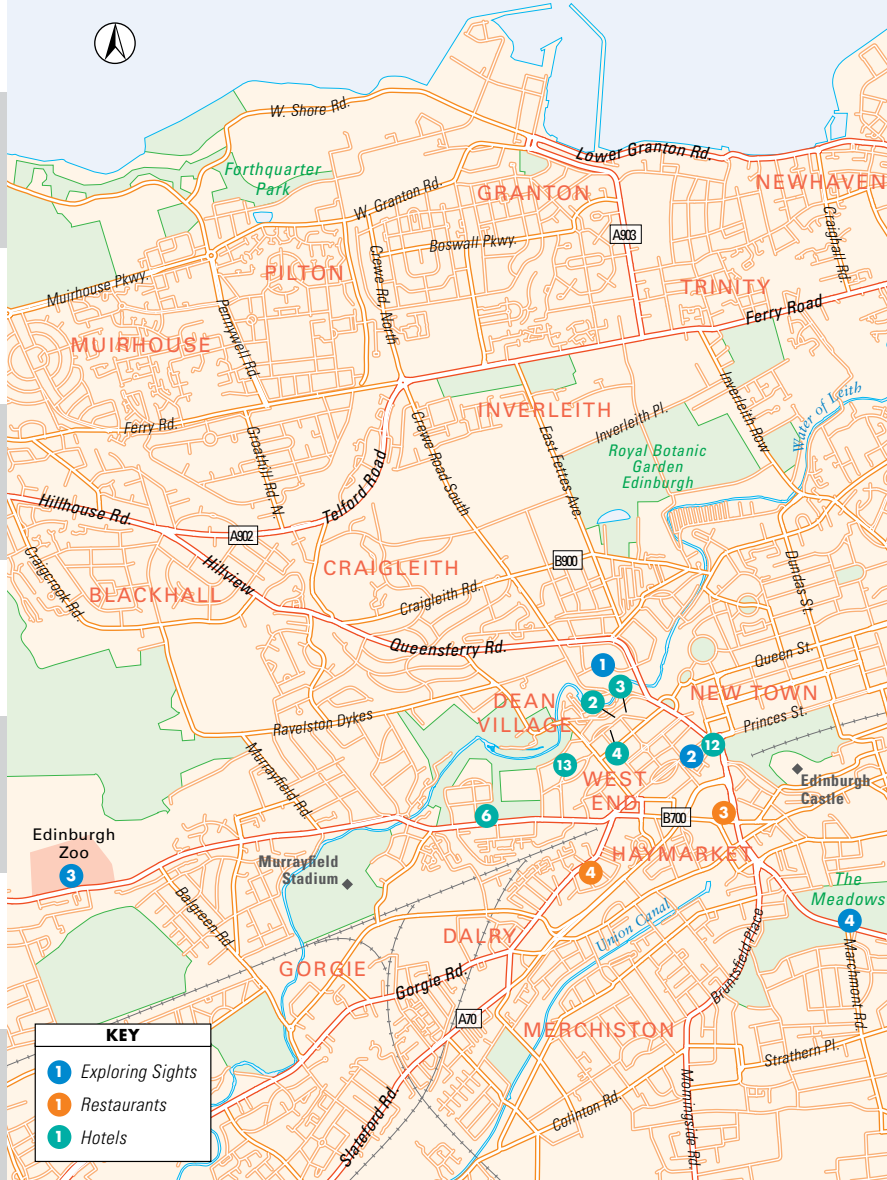

Even after business hours, the city's commercial center is a good place to find a variety of international restaurants.

★ Bread Meats Bread

$ | BURGER | This family-run burger joint, first opened in Glasgow in 2012 and expanded to Edinburgh in 2016, has already gained a nationwide reputation for its over-the-top add-ons like bone-marrow butter, kimchi, 'Nduja (spicy salami

Haymarket, West End, South Side, and Leith

Firth of Forth

0 1 mi
0 1 km

Sights

- Dean Village..... E6
- Edinburgh Gin Distillery..... E7
- Edinburgh Zoo..... A8
- The Meadows..... F8
- The Royal Yacht Britannia..... G3
- Water of Leith Walkway..... H4
- Aurora..... H4
- Bonsai..... G7
- Bread Meats Bread..... E7
- First Coast..... D8
- Kalpa..... G8
- The King's Wark..... H3
- The Kitchen..... H3
- Mimi's Bakehouse—Leith..... H4
- Restaurant Martin Wishart..... H4

Hotels

- AmarAgua..... H9
- B+B Edinburgh..... D6
- The Bonham..... E6
- The Chester Residence..... E7
- The Conifers..... G5
- The Dunstane Houses..... D7
- Fingal..... H3
- Glenalmond House..... H9
- Malmaison..... I3
- 94DR..... H8
- Prestonfield House..... I8
- Rutland Hotel..... E7
- The Victorian Town House..... D7

spread), and pomegranate molasses. Take a seat inside the chic, reclaimed-wood interior and choose from a menu packed with amped-up burgers, as well as chicken, veggie, and halal options.

Known for: signature Wolf of St. Vincent Street burger; no reservations so usually long waits; smart, modern interior. ☎ Average main: £14 ☎ 92 Lothian Rd., West End ☎ 0131/225-3000 🌐 www.bread-meatsbread.com.

Hotels

With easy access to some of the city's trendiest shops and cafés, the West End has lodgings that take advantage of the neighborhood's handsome Georgian-style town houses.

B+B Edinburgh

$$ | B&B/INN | FAMILY | Standing out along an elegant and tranquil West End terrace, this excellent B&B is the first Scottish outpost of supertrendy B+B Belgravia of London; an imposing Victorian mansion that combines grand public spaces with affordable modern accommodation. Pros: fascinating building in tranquil area; superb views; nice library and lounge bar. Cons: no night porter; hint of previous institutional use; basement rooms are dark. ☎ Rooms from: £135 ☎ 3 Rothesay Terr., West End ☎ 0131/225-5084 🌐 www.bb-edinburgh.com ➔ 27 rooms ☎ Free Breakfast.

The Bonham

$$ | HOTEL | There's a clubby atmosphere throughout this hotel, where the typical high-ceilinged town-house rooms have gorgeous late-19th-century architectural features mixed with pastel-shade furnishings and distinctly Scottish patterned fabrics. Pros: smart and stylish; excellent restaurant; quiet location. Cons: few common areas; needs upgrading in places; no air-conditioning. ☎ Rooms from: £165 ☎ 35 Drumsheugh Gardens, West End ☎ 0131/226-6050 🌐 www.thebonham.com ➔ 49 rooms ☎ Some meals.

★ The Chester Residence

$$$ | RENTAL | A decadent hideaway located just off from the main drag, these elegant self-service apartments offer a lot of space and a plethora of peace in a city where both can be hard to find. Pros: quiet but convenient location; well-stocked kitchens; beautiful gardens. Cons: lots of stairs and no elevators; no washing machines; no free on-site parking. ☎ Rooms from: £225 ☎ 9 Rothesay Pl., West End ☎ 0131/226-2075 🌐 www.chester-residence.com ➔ 23 apartments ☎ No meals.

Rutland Hotel

$$ | HOTEL | Nominated for several style awards, this chic boutique hotel at the west end of Princes Street offers 12 guest rooms with flamboyant fabrics and classic furnishings, as well as eight stylish serviced apartments, a flexible option for a family or two couples traveling together. Pros: friendly staff; casual and unpretentious; great bar and restaurant. Cons: decor too loud and busy for some; no elevators to apartments; no free on-site parking. ☎ Rooms from: £155 ☎ 1-3 Rutland St., West End ☎ 0131/229-3402 🌐 www.therutlandhotel.com ➔ 20 rooms ☎ Free Breakfast ☎ West End-Princes St.

Nightlife

BARS AND PUBS

Blue Blazer

BARS/PUBS | This cozy and characterful bar has an extensive selection of real ales, malt whiskies, and rums, all of which are enjoyed by a friendly, diverse crowd. ☎ 2 Spittal St., West End ☎ 0131/229-5030.

The Hanging Bat

BARS/PUBS | A favorite with beer-loving locals, this stylish modern bar of reclaimed wood and exposed brickwork has an extensive, regularly changing selection of craft beers from across the country on tap, from IPAs to saisons to porters. The food, cooked in the in-house smoker, is great, too (try the smoked pulled pork). ☎ 133 Lothian Rd., West End ☎ 0131/229-0759 🌐 www.thehangingbat.com.

★ The Jolly Botanist

BARS/PUBS | Gin lovers are spoiled for choice at this self-proclaimed "liquor emporium." Take a seat amid the quirky period furnishings and flick through a menu of 72 gins from around the world, which can be enjoyed with your choice of tonic or as part of an inventive gin cocktail. There's also good bar food available. ☎ 256-260 Morrison St., West End ☎ 0131/228-5596 🌐 www.thejollybotanist.co.uk.

Performing Arts

Cameo Picturehouse

FILM | Cameo has one large and two small auditoriums, both of which are extremely comfortable, showing a good mix of mainstream and art-house films. There's also a bar serving snacks late into the evening. ☎ 38 Home St., Tollcross ☎ 0871/902-5747 🌐 www.picturehouses.com.

★ Filmhouse

FILM | Widely considered to be among the best independent cinemas in Britain, the excellent three-screen Filmhouse is the go-to venue for modern, foreign-language, offbeat, and any other less-commercial films. It also holds frequent live events and mini-festivals for the discerning cinephile, and is the main hub for the International Film Festival each summer. The café and bar here are open late on weekends. ☎ 88 Lothian Rd., West End ☎ 0131/228-2688 🌐 www.filmhousecinema.com.

King's Theatre

THEATER | Built in 1906 and adorned with vibrant murals by artist John Byrne, the art nouveau King's Theatre has a great program of contemporary dramatic works. ☎ 2 Leven St., Tollcross ☎ 0131/529-6000 🌐 www.capitaltheatres.com.

The Lyceum

THEATER | Traditional plays and contemporary works, including previews or tours of London West End productions, are presented here. ☎ 30b Grindlay St., West End ☎ 0131/248-4848 🌐 www.lyceum.org.uk.

Traverse Theatre

THEATER | With its specially designed space, the Traverse Theatre has developed a solid reputation for new, stimulating plays by Scottish dramatists, as well as innovative dance performances. ☎ 10 Cambridge St., West End ☎ 0131/228-1404 🌐 www.traverse.co.uk.

Usher Hall

MUSIC | Edinburgh's grandest concert venue, Usher Hall hosts a wide range of national and international performers, from Kaiser Chiefs and Vampire Weekend to the Royal Scottish National Orchestra. ☎ Lothian Rd., West End ☎ 0131/228-1155 🌐 www.usherhall.co.uk.

Shopping

CLOTHING

Herman Brown

CLOTHING | This secondhand clothing store is where cashmere twinsets and classic luxe labels are sought and found. ☎ 151 W. Port, West End ☎ 0131/228-2589 🌐 www.hermanbrown.co.uk.

South Side

This residential district, which includes the suburbs of Morningside, Marchmont, and Newington (among others), offers a peek at the comings and goings of regular Edinburghers. Cost-conscious visitors can find lots of affordable restaurants and budget B&Bs here.

Sights

★ The Meadows

CITY PARK | FAMILY | Edinburgh's most popular green space, The Meadows is the first port of call for nearby workers, students, and families when the sun is out (or even when it isn't). You'll find people making the most of the grass here: picnicking, barbecuing, playing soccer, throwing frisbees, and flying kites. More formal sports facilities include tennis courts, a small golf putting course, and the biggest kids' play area in Edinburgh. Come during one of the city's many cultural festivals and there's likely to be a show on, too. ☒ Melville Dr., South Side ☎ 0131/529-5151 🌐 www.themeadowsofedinburgh.co.uk.

Restaurants

The presence of university professors and students means eateries that are both affordable and interesting.

Bonsai

$ | JAPANESE | The owners of Bonsai regularly visit Tokyo to research the casual dining scene, and their expertise is setting a high standard for Japanese cuisine in Edinburgh. The succulent gyoza (steamed dumplings) are pliant and tasty, while the wide variety of noodle, teriyaki, and sushi dishes balance sweet and sour deliciously. Known for: authentic sushi; great dragon gajjin-zushi (inside-out roll); friendly and informal vibe. ☑ Average main: £6 ☒ 46 W. Richmond St., South Side ☎ 0131/668-3847 🌐 www.bonsai-barbistro.co.uk.

★ Kalpna

$ | INDIAN | Amid an ordinary row of shops, the facade of this vegetarian Indian restaurant may be unremarkable, but the food is exceptional and a great value, too. You'll find south- and west-Indian specialties, including dam aloo kashmiri (a medium-spicy potato dish with a sauce made from honey, pistachios, and almonds) and bangan achari (super-spicy marinated eggplants). Known for: authentic veggie Indian fare; lively interior with exotic mosaics; great lunchtime buffet. ☑ Average main: £10 ☒ 2-3 St. Patrick Sq., South Side ☎ 0131/667-9890 🌐 www.kalpnarestaurant.com.

Hotels

The B&Bs and guesthouses in this residential area offer good value.

AmarAgua

$ | B&B/INN | Four-poster beds, a tranquil location, and bountiful breakfasts set this Victorian town-house B&B apart. Pros: quiet setting; snug rooms; wonderful and varied breakfasts. Cons: far from the city center; minimum two-night stay; early checkout (10 am) and late check-in (5 pm). ☑ Rooms from: £105 ☒ 10 Kilmaurs Terr., Newington ☎ 0131/667-6775 🌐 www.amaragua.co.uk ☹ Closed Jan ➔ 5 rooms 🍷 Free Breakfast.

Glenalmond House

$ | B&B/INN | Elegantly furnished rooms, a friendly atmosphere, and a hearty breakfast are three big factors that make this town-house B&B a popular budget stay. Pros: knowledgeable owners; elegant furnishings; amazing sausages at breakfast. Cons: a 30-minute walk to the Royal Mile; some rooms small; street noise can be audible. ☑ Rooms from: £100 ☒ 25 Mayfield Gardens, South Side ☎ 0131/668-2392 🌐 www.glenalmondhouse.com ➔ 9 rooms 🍷 Free Breakfast.

94DR

$$ | B&B/INN | Like the infectiously optimistic owners, Paul and John, 94DR reaches for the stars with its stylish decor and contemporary trappings, while maintaining a comfortable, homey feel. Pros: warm welcome; gay-friendly vibe; smashing breakfast. Cons: 25-minute walk to the city center; some bathrooms small; a little pricey. ☑ Rooms from: £175 ☒ 94 Dalkeith Rd., South Side

☎ 0131/662-9265 🌐 www.94dr.com ➔ 7 rooms 🍷 Free Breakfast.

★ Prestonfield House

$$$ | HOTEL | The Highland "coos" (cows), peacocks, and grouse wandering around this hotel's 20-acre grounds transport you to a whole new world; one that's only five minutes by car from the Royal Mile. Pros: baroque grandeur; comfortable beds; extensive grounds. Cons: underwhelming showers; brooding decor can look gloomy; bit pretentious for some. ☑ Rooms from: £260 ☒ Priestfield Rd., Prestonfield ☎ 0131/225-7800 🌐 www.prestonfield.com ➔ 23 rooms 🍷 Some meals.

Nightlife

BARS AND PUBS

Cloisters

BARS/PUBS | Set within an old church parsonage, Cloisters now offers a very modern form of sanctuary: real ales, fine whisky, and good food at reasonable prices, with a total absence of music and game machines. ☒ 26 Brougham St., Tollcross ☎ 0131/221-9997 🌐 www.cloistersbar.com.

Leslie's Bar

BARS/PUBS | Retaining its original mahogany island bar, the late-Victorian-era Leslie's Bar is renowned for its gorgeous interior and for serving a range of traditional Scottish ales and malt whiskies. ☒ 45-47 Ratcliffe Terr., South Side ☎ 0131/667-7205.

CEILIDHS AND SCOTTISH EVENINGS

★ Edinburgh Ceilidh Club

THEMED ENTERTAINMENT | One of Edinburgh's most popular ceilidhs, this traditional Scottish music and dance night is held each Tuesday at Summerhall. It's ideal for beginners, as a caller teaches the dance steps before the live band begins each song. The club also holds irregular nights at Assembly Roxy near South Bridge. ☒ Summerhall, 1 Summerhall Pl.,

South Side ☎ 0131/560-1580 🌐 www.edinburghceilidhclub.com 🍷 £7.

Performing Arts

Church Hill Theatre

THEATER | The intimate, 335-seat Church Hill Theatre, managed by the city council, hosts high-quality productions by local amateur dramatic societies. ☒ 33 Morningside Rd., Morningside ☎ 0131/220-4348 🌐 www.assemblyroomsedinburgh.co.uk.

Shopping

ANTIQUES

Courtyard Antiques

ANTIQUES/COLLECTIBLES | This lovely shop, tucked down a tiny alleyway, stocks a mixture of high-quality antiques, toys, and militaria. ☒ 108a Causewayside, Sciennes ☎ 0131/662-9008 🌐 www.edinburghcourtyardantiques.co.uk.

Leith

Just north of the city is Edinburgh's port, a place brimming with seafaring history and undergoing a supercharged revival after years of postwar neglect. It may not be as pristine as much of modern-day Edinburgh, but there are plenty of cobbled streets, dockside buildings, and bobbing boats to capture your imagination. Here along the lowest reaches of the Water of Leith (the river that flows through town), you'll find an ever-growing array of modish shops, pubs, and restaurants. Leith's major attraction is the Royal Yacht Britannia, moored outside the huge Ocean Terminal shopping mall. You can reach Leith from the center by walking down Leith Walk from the east end of Princes Street (20 to 30 minutes)—or, better yet, walk along the beautiful Water of Leith Walkway (a great way to forget you're in a capital city). Alternatively, you can hop on a bus.

Sights

The Royal Yacht Britannia

LIGHTHOUSE | FAMILY | Moored on the waterfront at Leith is the Royal Yacht Britannia—launched in Scotland in 1953, retired in 1997, and now returned to her home country. A favorite of Queen Elizabeth II (she is reported to have shed a tear at its decommissioning ceremony), it is now open for the public to explore, from the royal apartments on the upper floors to the more functional engine room, bridge, galleys, and captain's cabin. The visitor center, based within the hulking, onshore Ocean Terminal shopping mall, has a variety of fascinating exhibits and photographs relating to the yacht's history. Leith ☎ 0131/555-5566 🌐 www.royalyachtbritannia.co.uk 📄 £16.50.

★ Water of Leith Walkway

TRAIL | The Water of Leith, Edinburgh's main river, rises in the Pentland Hills, skirts the edges of the city center, then heads out to the port at Leith, where it flows into the Firth of Forth. For a scenic stroll from the West End out to Leith, you can join this waterside walkway at the Scottish National Gallery of Modern Art, follow it through pretty Dean Village and Stockbridge, and continue past the Royal Botanic Garden, before emerging at The Shore. It takes about 90 minutes at a leisurely pace—and with all the tree-lined paths, pretty stone bridges, colorful wildflowers, and stunning birdlife (including herons, kingfishers, and buzzards) to see, we do suggest taking your time. Keep an eye out, too, for Anthony Gormley's "6 Times" artwork, a series of life-sized human sculptures dotted along the river. Leith ☎ 0131/455-7367 🌐 www.water-of-leith.org.uk.

Restaurants

Seafood lovers are drawn to the old port of Leith to sample the freshest seafood amid the authentic seafaring setting.

Some of Scotland's most renowned chefs have made Leith—and more specifically, The Shore, its upmarket waterfront—their home.

★ Aurora

$ | BRITISH | Probably the best quality-to-value dining option in Leith, Aurora offers deliciously inventive three-course lunch menus (with plenty of tasty sourdough bread) for the price of a pub main. This modern, Nordic-style bistro also serves heavenly brunches, as well as a varied dinner menu—choose anything from informal, tapas-style sharing plates to elaborate, six-course tasting menus with a wine pairing. Known for: high quality at a low cost; sumptuous braised pork cheeks; interior of reclaimed materials. Average main: £9 ☎ 187 Great Junction St., Leith ☎ 0131/554-5537 🌐 www.auroraedinburgh.co.uk 📄 Closed Mon. and Tues.

The King's Wark

$$ | BRITISH | This gastro-pub at The Shore in Leith combines a beautiful historic setting with great quality food and a wide selection of Scottish gins. At lunchtime, the dark-wood bar does a roaring trade in simple fare such as gourmet burgers, fish cakes, and haggis (traditional or vegetarian), but in the evening, the kitchen ups the ante with a chalkboard menu of locally caught seafood specialties, from hake to monkfish. Known for: affordable quality cuisine; atmospheric setting; Leith's best roast dinner. Average main: £16 ☎ 36 The Shore, Leith ☎ 0131/554-9260 🌐 www.kingswark.co.uk.

The Kitchen

$$$$ | FRENCH | A perennially popular high-end dining option, Tom Kitchen's Michelin-starred venture packs in the crowds. Kitchen, who trained in France, runs a tight ship, and his passion for using seasonal and locally sourced produce to his own creative ends shows no sign of waning. Known for: nose-to-tail philosophy; lovely setting; very expensive dinners. Average main: £35 ☎ 78 Commercial Leith's most famous sight is the moored Royal Yacht Britannia, which once carried Queen Elizabeth and is now open to the public to explore.

Quay, Leith ☎ 0131/555-1755 🌐 thekitchen.com 📄 Closed Sun. and Mon.

★ Mimi's Bakehouse—Leith

$ | BAKERY | FAMILY | Despite its large interior with acres of seating, this bakery-café still regularly has lines out the door. The reason is simple: it does the best cakes in Edinburgh, using everything from Oreos to Reese's Pieces to strawberries and cream. Known for: delicious and creative cakes; to-die-for breakfasts; fun and cheeky decor. Average main: £10 ☎ 63 The Shore, Leith ☎ 0131/555-5908 🌐 www.mimisbakehouse.com 📄 No dinner.

★ Restaurant Martin Wishart

$$$$ | FRENCH | Leith's premier dining experience, this high-end restaurant combines imaginative cuisine, luxuriously understated decor, and a lovely waterfront location. Renowned Michelin-starred chef Martin Wishart woo's diners with his inspired menu of artistically presented, French-influenced dishes. Known for: impeccable cuisine; beautiful location; multicourse tasting menus (with vegetarian versions of each). Average main: £35 ☎ 54 The Shore, Leith ☎ 0131/553-3557 🌐 www.restaurantmartinwishart.co.uk 📄 Closed Sun. and Mon.

Hotels

Staying in Leith means you'll be away from the main Old and New Town sights, but near to the Royal Yacht Britannia and some of the city's best dining options.

The Conifers

$ | B&B/INN | This small family-run guesthouse in a red-sandstone town house offers simple, traditionally decorated rooms and warm hospitality. Pros: nice mix of old and new; many original fittings; hearty breakfasts. Cons: a bit of a walk to the city center; just as far to The Shore; one bathroom not en suite. Rooms from: £100 ☎ 56 Pilrig St., Leith ☎ 0131/554-5162 🌐 www.conifersguesthouse.com ➡ 4 rooms 📄 Free Breakfast.

Leith, Edinburgh's Seaport

Situated on the south shore of the Firth of Forth, Leith was a separate town until it merged with the city in 1920. After World War II and up until the 1980s, the declining seaport became known as an impoverished corner of Edinburgh, but in recent years it has been completely revitalized with the restoration of commercial buildings and the construction of new luxury housing, boutique hotels, hipster cafés, and upmarket restaurants. All the docks have been redeveloped, looked over variously by a shopping mall, a government building, and office and apartment blocks.

In earlier times Leith was the stage for many historic happenings. In 1560 Mary of Guise—mother of Mary, Queen of Scots—ruled Scotland from Leith; her daughter landed in Leith the following year to embark on her infamous reign. A century later Cromwell led his troops to Leith to root out Scottish royalists. And in 1744 Leith became the so-called “home of golf,” as official rules to the game were devised on Leith Links, a lovely park that remains to this day.

Fingal

$$$ | HOTEL | For something completely different, step aboard this floating boutique hotel, permanently moored near the Royal Yacht Britannia in Leith, and discover 23 luxurious cabins and a chic restaurant and bar, all set above a lovingly preserved engine room. Pros: out-of-the-ordinary luxury; close to Leith's best bars and restaurants; quiet and peaceful. Cons: no room service; dinner is overpriced; a little way out of the center. Rooms from: £220 Alexandra Dock, Leith ☎ 0131/357–5000 www.fingal.co.uk ➡ 23 rooms.

Malmaison

$$ | HOTEL | Once a seamen's hostel, this French-inspired boutique hotel, which is part of a pioneering U.K.-wide chain, draws a refined clientele to its superchic shorefront rooms. A dramatic black-and-taupe color scheme prevails in the public areas, while the hip rooms are dominated by tartan designs and shades of heather, with bolder fabrics and brighter features in the suites. Pros: impressive building; elegant interiors; great waterfront location. Cons: price fluctuates wildly; bar sometimes rowdy at night; a long way from the center of town. Rooms from: £135 1 Tower Pl., Leith ☎ 0131/285–1478 malmaison.com-edinburgh.com ➡ 100 rooms Free Breakfast.

Nightlife

BARS AND PUBS

The Lioness of Leith

BARS/PUBS | This historic pub has always been a popular Leith Walk haunt for locals, but recent acclaim for their gourmet, gargantuan Lioness Burgers has brought them wider attention. 21–26 Duke St., Leith ☎ 0131/629–0580 www.thelionessofleith.co.uk.

Malt & Hops

BARS/PUBS | First opening its doors in 1749, Malt & Hops has a fine waterfront location and serves microbrewery cask ales—with a selection good enough to be endorsed by CAMRA (the Campaign for Real Ale). It also has a resident ghost. 45 The Shore, Leith ☎ 0131/555–0083.

★ Teuchters Landing

BARS/PUBS | Tucked away down a side street near The Shore, Teuchters Landing is a perennially popular pub for its wide range of whiskies and beers, its excellent pub food (try the nachos with cheddar and haggis), and its pontoon for sunny days. It's also a great place for watching live sports. If you're feeling lucky, try the Hoop of Destiny game, for your chance to land a vintage dram for a fraction of its usual price. 1c Dock Pl., Leith ☎ 0131/554–7427 www.aroomin.co.uk.

Shopping

SHOPPING CENTERS

Ocean Terminal

SHOPPING CENTERS/MALLS | As well as being home to the Royal Yacht Britannia, this on-the-water mall also has an impressive range of big-name brand stores and independent craft shops, as well as bars, restaurants, and a cinema. Ocean Dr., Leith ☎ 0131/555–8888 www.oceanterminal.com.

OUTDOOR SPORTS GEAR

Tiso Edinburgh Outdoor Experience

SPORTING GOODS | This sizable store stocks outdoor clothing, boots, and jackets ideal for hiking in the Highlands. It also sells tents and camping accessories for the truly hardy. There's a good little café inside, too. 41 Commercial St., Leith ☎ 0131/554–0804 www.tiso.com.

West Lothian and the Forth Valley

If you stand on an Edinburgh eminence—the castle ramparts, Arthur's Seat, Calton Hill—you can plan a few Lothian excursions without even the aid of a map. The Lothians is the collective name given to the swath of countryside south of the Firth of Forth and surrounding Edinburgh. Many courtly and aristocratic families lived here, and the region still has the castles and mansions to prove it. And with the rich came deer parks, gardens in the French style, and Lothian's fame as a seed plot for Lowland gentility.

West Lothian comprises a good bit of Scotland's central belt. The River Forth snakes across a widening floodplain on its descent from the Highlands, and by the time it reaches the western extremities of Edinburgh, it has already passed below the mighty Forth bridges and become a broad estuary. Castles and historic houses sprout thickly on both sides of the Forth. You can explore a number of them, and the territory north of the River Forth, in a day or two, or you can just pick one excursion for a day trip from Edinburgh.

GETTING HERE AND AROUND BUS TRAVEL

First Bus and Lothian Buses link most of this area. If you're planning to see more than one sight in the region by bus, it's worth planning an itinerary in advance.

CAR TRAVEL

The Queensferry Road, also known as the A90, is the main thoroughfare running through this region. After crossing the Forth Bridge, it joins the M90 heading north, with branches off to Culross (on the A985), Dunfermline (on the A823), and the Ochil Hills (on the A91).

TRAIN TRAVEL

Dalmeny (for South Queensferry), Linlithgow, and Dunfermline all have rail stations and can be reached from Edinburgh stations.

South Queensferry

7 miles west of Edinburgh.

This pleasant little waterside community, a former ferry port, is completely dominated by the Forth Bridges, three dramatic structures of contrasting architecture (dating from the 19th, 20th, and 21st centuries) that span the Firth of Forth at this historic crossing point. It's near a number of historic and cultural sights.

West Lothian and the Forth Valley

GETTING HERE AND AROUND

The Queensferry Road, also known as the A90, is the main artery west from Edinburgh toward the Forth Bridge, Hopetoun House, the House of the Binn, and Blackness Castle.

Sights

Dalmeny House

HOUSE | The first of the stately houses clustered on the western edge of Edinburgh, Dalmeny House is the home of the Earl and Countess of Rosebery. This 1815 Tudor Gothic mansion displays among its sumptuous interiors the best of the family's famous collection of 18th-century French furniture. Highlights include the library, the Napoléon Room, the Vincennes and Sevres porcelain collections, and the drawing room, with its tapestries and intricately wrought

French furniture. Admission is by guided tour in June and July only. ☎ South Queensferry 0131/331-1888 🌐 www.roseberyestates.co.uk 🎫 £10 🕒 Closed Aug.–May and Thurs.–Sat. in June and July.

Forth Bridge

BRIDGE/TUNNEL | Opened in 1890, when it was hailed as the eighth wonder of the world, this iconic red cantilevered rail bridge is a UNESCO World Heritage site. The extraordinary, 1½-mile-long crossing expands by another yard or so on a hot summer's day. The famous 19th-century bridge has since been joined by two neighbors; the 20th-century Forth Road Bridge (opened 1964) and the 21st-century Queensferry Crossing (opened 2017). ☎ South Queensferry 🌐 www.theforthbridges.org.

A quick day trip from Edinburgh, one of Inchcolm Island's most interesting sights is its 12th-century abbey.

Hopetoun House

HOUSE | The palatial premises of Hopetoun House are among Scotland's grandest courtly seats, and are now home to the Marquesses of Linlithgow. The enormous property was started in 1699 to the original plans of Sir William Bruce, then enlarged between 1721 and 1754 by William Adam and his sons Robert and John. The house has decorative work of the highest order and a notable painting collection, plus all the trappings to keep you entertained: a nature trail, a restaurant in the former stables, a farm shop, and a museum. The estate also specializes in clay pigeon shooting; groups of six or more can book an expert-led introductory session, with prices starting at £45 per person. ☎ South Queensferry 0131/331-2451 🌐 www.hopetoun.co.uk 🎫 £10.50; grounds only £4.75 🕒 Closed Oct.–Mar.

★ Inchcolm Island

BOAT TOURS | Accessible by boat tour from South Queensferry, Inchcolm Island is home to a beautifully preserved

12th-century abbey, a First World War fortress, green cliffs, sandy beaches, and an abundance of wildlife, from playful gray seals to brightly colored puffins. Prepare to be dive-bombed by seagulls if you visit during nesting season. The island is run by Historic Scotland, which levies an entry fee of £6, but boat tours (run by Maid of the Forth and Forth Boat Tours) include this in the price of their tickets. ☎ Inchcolm Island 01383/823332 🌐 www.historicenvironment.scot 🎫 £20 (boat tour and island entry) 🕒 Closed Nov.–Mar.

🍴 Restaurants

The Boat House

$$ | MODERN BRITISH | Scotland's natural larder is on display at this romantic restaurant on the banks of the Forth. Seafood is the star of the show, and chef Paul Steward is the man behind the imaginative yet unfussy recipes. Known for: delicious seafood; freshly caught daily specials; spectacular views from the patio. 📊 Average main: £18 🕒 22 High

St. ☎ 0131/331-5429 🌐 www.theboat-house-sq.co.uk.

Jupiter Artland

10 miles west of Edinburgh.

For anyone drawn to interesting art and beautiful open spaces, a visit to this open-air collection of sculptures by world-renowned artists is a must.

GETTING HERE AND AROUND

To reach Jupiter Artland from Edinburgh, take the A71 southwest toward Kilmarnock. Just after Wilkieston, turn right onto the B7015. It's also easy to reach by bus: the X27 departs from Princes Street, while Bus 27 leaves from Dalry Road near Haymarket.

Sights

★ Jupiter Artland

MUSEUM | The beautiful grounds of a Jacobean manor house have been transformed by an art-loving couple, Robert and Nicky Wilson, into an impressive sculpture park. With the aid of a map you can explore the magical landscapes and encounter works by renowned artists including Andy Goldsworthy, Anya Gallaccio, Jim Lambie, Nathan Coley, Ian Hamilton Finlay, and Anish Kapoor, among many others. A highlight is walking around Charles Jencks's Cells of Life, a series of shapely, grass-covered mounds. ☒ Bonnington House Steadings, Wilkieston, Edinburgh ☎ 01506/889900 🌐 www.jupiterartland.org 🎟 £9 ⌚ Closed Oct.–mid May.

Linlithgow

12 miles west of Edinburgh.

Linlithgow is best known for its lochside palace, the impressive remnants of what was once the seat of the Stewart kings,

but there are other fortified sights to see, too.

GETTING HERE AND AROUND

From Edinburgh, take the A90 westward, continuing onto the A904 and M9, to reach Linlithgow. You can also board a train to Linlithgow station, which is just a short walk from the palace.

Sights

Blackness Castle

CASTLE/PALACE | Standing like a grounded ship on the very edge of the Forth, this curious 15th-century structure has had a varied career as a strategic fortress, state prison, powder magazine, and youth hostel. The countryside is gently green and cultivated, and open views extend across the blue Forth to the distant ramparts of the Ochil Hills. ☒ Blackness, Linlithgow ☎ 01506/834807 🌐 www.historicenvironment.scot 🎟 £6.

House of the Binns

HOUSE | The 17th-century general “Bloody” Tam Dalyell (c. 1599–1685) transformed a fortified stronghold into a gracious mansion, the House of the Binns. The name derives from bynn, the old Scottish word for hill. The present exterior dates from around 1810 and shows a remodeling into a kind of mock fort with crenellated battlements and turrets. Inside, see magnificent Elizabethan-style plaster ceilings. ☒ Off A904, Linlithgow ☎ 01786/812664 🌐 www.nts.org.uk 🎟 £10.50 ⌚ House closed Jan.–Mar.

Linlithgow Palace

CASTLE/PALACE | On the edge of Linlithgow Loch stands the splendid ruin of Linlithgow Palace, the birthplace of Mary, Queen of Scots. Burned, perhaps accidentally, by Hanoverian troops during the last Jacobite rebellion in 1746, this impressive shell stands on a site of great antiquity, though an earlier fire in 1424 destroyed any hard evidence of medieval life here. The palace gatehouse was built in the early 16th century, and the central courtyard's elaborate fountain dates from around 1535. The halls and great rooms are cold, echoing stone husks now in the care of Historic Scotland. ☒ Kirkgate, Linlithgow ☎ 01506/842896 🌐 www.historicenvironment.scot 🎟 £7.20.

Due to its role as a living museum, the entire town of Culross is considered a National Trust sight.

Culross

17 miles northwest of Edinburgh.

With its mercat cross, cobbled streets, tolbooth, and narrow wynds (alleys), seaside Culross is a picturesque little town. It's also a living museum of 17th-century Scottish life, with preserved historic properties open to the public. Culross once had a thriving industry and export trade in coal and salt (the coal was used in the salt-panning process), but as local coal became exhausted, the impetus of the Industrial Revolution passed Culross by, while other parts of the Forth Valley prospered. Culross became a backwater town, and the merchants' houses of the 17th and 18th centuries were never replaced by Victorian developments or modern architecture. In the 1930s the National Trust for Scotland started to buy up the decaying properties with a view to preservation. Today ordinary citizens live in many of these properties, but others are available to explore. Walking tours of the town are available for a small fee.

GETTING HERE AND AROUND

To get here by car, head north of the Forth Bridge on the A90, then westward on the A985. You can get here by bus (No. 8) from Dunfermline, which in turn is easily reached by train from Edinburgh.

Sights

★ Culross Palace

MUSEUM VILLAGE | Don't let the name fool you: this 16th-century merchant's house was never a royal residence, and lacks the ostentatious grandeur of a palace. It is, however, a fascinating slice of social history—the owner was a pioneer in local coal mining and salt production—and its interiors of Baltic pine, Dutch floor tiles, and Staffordshire pottery was pretty flashy for its time. It was also visited by King James VI in 1617. Today it retains its period charms, including a garden that grows herbs and vegetables typical of the period. ✉ Culross Palace ☎ 01383/880359 🌐 www.nts.org.uk 🕒 £10.50 🗓 Closed weekends Oct.–Mar.

Dunfermline

16 miles northwest of Edinburgh.

Oft-overlooked Dunfermline was once the world center for the production of damask linen, but the town is better known today as the birthplace of millionaire industrialist and philanthropist Andrew Carnegie (1835–1919). Undoubtedly Dunfermline's most famous son, Carnegie endowed the town with a park, library, fitness center, and, naturally, a Carnegie Hall, still the focus of the town's culture and entertainment.

GETTING HERE AND AROUND

When you're driving, head north on the A90, turning off onto the A823 a few miles north of the Forth Bridge. You can also reach the town by train from Edinburgh in about 35 minutes.

Andrew Carnegie Birthplace Museum

MUSEUM | Scottish-American industrialist and noted philanthropist Andrew Carnegie was born here in 1835. Don't be misled by the simple exterior of this 18th-century weaver's cottage—inside it opens into a larger hall, where documents, photographs, and artifacts relate his fascinating life story. The collection includes art from a wide range of periods, from medieval to 19th century to art deco, as well as displays on the genus of Jurassic dinosaur named after the great man—Diplodocus carnegii. ✉ Moodie St. ☎ 01383/724302 🌐 www.carnegiebirthplace.com 🕒 Free.

Dunfermline Abbey and Palace

RELIGIOUS SITE | This impressive complex, the literal and metaphorical centerpiece of Dunfermline, was founded in the 11th century as a Benedictine abbey by Queen Margaret, the English wife of Scottish king Malcolm III. The present church is a mishmash of medieval and Norman work, and a decorative brass tomb here is the final resting place of Robert the Bruce (1274–1329). A palace was also part of the complex here, and was the birthplace of Charles I (1600–49); its ruins lie beside the abbey. Dunfermline was the seat of the royal court of Scotland until the end of the 11th century, and its central role in Scottish affairs is explored by means of display panels dotted around the drafty but hallowed buildings. ✉ St. Margaret St. ☎ 01383/739026 🌐 www.historicenvironment.scot 🕒 £6 🗓 Closed Thurs. and Fri. Oct.–Mar.

Midlothian and East Lothian

Stretching east to the sea and south to the Lowlands from Edinburgh, the regions of Midlothian and East Lothian, and their many attractions, are all within an hour's reach of Edinburgh.

Despite its countless tourist draws, including Scotland's finest stone carvings at Rosslyn Chapel, associations with Sir Walter Scott, outstanding castles, and miles of rolling countryside, Midlothian (the area immediately south of Edinburgh) remained off the beaten path for years. Fortunately, things are starting to change, as visitors look beyond the capital and the well-manicured charm of East Lothian to explore the pretty working towns and suburbs of Midlothian.

East Lothian, on the other hand, has been a draw for decades. An upmarket stockbroker belt, East Lothian's biggest draws are its golf courses of world rank, most notably Muirfield, plus a scattering of stately homes and interesting hotels. Its photogenic villages, active fishing harbors, dramatic cliff-side castles, and vistas of pastoral Lowland Scotland seem a world away from bustling Edinburgh—yet excellent transport links mean they're easy and quick to reach.

GETTING HERE AND AROUND

BUS TRAVEL

Buses from Edinburgh serve towns and villages throughout Midlothian and East Lothian. For details of all services, inquire at the Edinburgh Bus Station, immediately east of St. Andrew Square in Edinburgh.

CAR TRAVEL

A quick route to Rosslyn Chapel follows the A701, while the A7 heads toward Gorebridge and the National Mining Museum Scotland. The A1 passes Newhailes, Haddington, and Dunbar. Take the A198 to Gullane, North Berwick, and Tantallon Castle.

TRAIN TRAVEL

There is very limited train service in Midlothian. In East Lothian there are tracks running east along the coast with regular services to North Berwick and Dunbar.

Newhailes

5 miles east of Edinburgh.

With sumptuous interiors and relaxing grounds, this neo-Palladian villa a few miles east of Edinburgh hosted many luminaries of the Scottish Enlightenment.

GETTING HERE AND AROUND

To get here from Edinburgh, take the A1 east, then transfer to the A6095. You can also get here by Lothian Bus 30 or by train to Newcraighall station, a 20-minute walk from the villa.

Sights

Newhailes

CASTLE/PALACE | This fine late-17th-century house was designed by Scottish architect James Smith in 1686 as his own home. He later sold it to Lord Bellendon, and in 1707 it was bought by Sir David Dalrymple, first Baronet of Hailes, who improved and extended the house, adding one of the finest rococo interiors in Scotland. The library here played host to many famous figures from the Scottish Enlightenment, as well as inveterate Scot-basher Dr. Samuel Johnson, who dubbed the library “the most learned room in Europe.” Most of the original interiors and furnishings remain intact, and there are beautiful walks around the landscaped grounds and through the surrounding woodland. ✉ Newhailes Rd., Musselburgh ☎ 0131/653-5599 🌐 www.nts.org.uk 🏠 £12.50 🕒 Entire property closed Nov.–mid-Apr. House closed Tues. and Wed. mid-Apr.–Oct.

Roslin

7 miles south of Edinburgh.

It may be best known for its extraordinary chapel, but Roslin itself is a pleasant place to while away some time. There are some lovely walks from the village along the North River Esk.

GETTING HERE AND AROUND

By car take the A701 south from Edinburgh, turning off onto the B7006 just north of the town. Lothian Buses also shuttle passengers from Edinburgh: Bus 37 from North Bridge is the most direct way.

Sights

★ Rosslyn Chapel

RELIGIOUS SITE | This chapel has always beckoned curious visitors intrigued by the various legends surrounding its magnificent carvings, but today it pulses with tourists as never before. Much of this can be attributed to Dan Brown’s best-selling 2003 mystery novel The Da Vinci Code, which featured the chapel heavily, claiming it has a secret sign that can lead you to the Holy Grail. Whether you’re a fan of the book or not, this Episcopal chapel (services continue to be held here) remains an imperative stop on any traveler’s itinerary. Originally conceived by Sir William Sinclair (circa 1404–80) and dedicated to St. Matthew in 1446, the chapel is outstanding for the quality and variety of the carving inside. Covering almost every square inch of stonework are human figures, animals, and plants. The meaning of these remains subject to many theories; some depict symbols from the medieval order of the Knights Templar and from Freemasonry. The chapel’s design called for a cruciform structure, but only the choir and parts of the east transept walls were fully completed. Free talks about the building’s history are held daily. ✉ Chapel Loan ☎ 0131/440-2159 🌐 www.rosslynchapel.com 🏠 £9.

Restaurants

The Original Rosslyn Inn

$ | BRITISH | This atmospheric inn, on the crossroads in the center of Roslin village, serves tasty, hearty pub grub, including fish-and-chips, burgers, and pies, plus good veggie options. The inn is very close to Rosslyn Chapel; walk past the car park for a few minutes and you’ll see it on the other side of the main road.

Known for: traditional Scottish pub; great steak-and-ale pie; convenient location.

Rosslyn Chapel is one of Scotland’s most intact 15th-century churches.

📍 Average main: £9 📍 2–4 Main St., Roslin ☎ 0131/440-2384 🌐 www.theoriginal-rosslyninn.co.uk.

The Pentlands

20 miles south of Edinburgh.

These unmistakable hills begin almost in the suburbs of Edinburgh, and they make for a very welcome escape from the city crowds. There are access points to the hills along the A702, but the best two are Snowsports Centre and Flotterstone. At each of these you can find a parking lot, a lovely pub, and quiet walking paths leading up into the hills.

GETTING HERE AND AROUND

The easiest way to reach the Pentlands is by car—simply follow the A702 south. Bus 101 from Edinburgh town center also follows this route. Alternatively, you can cycle into the hills in under an hour.

Restaurants

The Steading

$ | BRITISH | This pleasant pub, set within a converted farm building on the roadside of the A702, serves traditional, freshly prepared pub food, along with hearty snacks like sandwiches, baked potatoes, and nachos. It is right by the parking lot for the Snowsports Centre, from which several Pentlands walking trails begin. Known for: hearty pub grub; beautiful building; great location. 📍 Average main: £10 📍 118–120 Biggar Rd., Edinburgh ☎ 0131/445-1128 🌐 www.thesteadingedinburgh.co.uk.

National Mining Museum Scotland

9 miles southeast of Edinburgh.

The museum provides visitors with a sobering look into the lives of coal miners and the difficult conditions they endured down Scotland's mines.

GETTING HERE AND AROUND

To get here by car, head south on the A1 (turning into the A6106 and A7) to Newtongrange. You can also take a train from Edinburgh Waverley to Newtongrange (the museum is a six-minute walk away), or come by bus: 29 and X95 stop right outside the museum.

National Mining Museum Scotland

MUSEUM | In the former mining community of Newtongrange, the National Mining Museum Scotland provides a good introduction to the history of the country's mining industry. With the help of a guided tour and video exhibits, you can experience life deep below the ground. Interactive displays and "magic helmets" also bring the tour to life and relate the power that the mining company held over the lives of workers in Scotland's largest planned mining village. This frighteningly autocratic system, in which the company owned the houses, shops, and even the pub, survived well into the 1930s. Tours are conducted by ex-miners. ☎ Lady Victoria Colliery, A7, Newtongrange ☎ 0131/663-7519 🌐 www.nationalminingmuseum.com 💷 £9.50.

Crichton Castle

14 miles southeast of Edinburgh.

Sitting on a terrace overlooking a beautiful river valley, this 14th-century structure with diamond-faceted facade was home to the Crichtons, and later the earls of Bothwell.

GETTING HERE AND AROUND

Head south on the A1 and A68, then take the turnoff to the B6372 just before Pathhead.

Crichton Castle

CASTLE/PALACE | Standing amid rolling hills that are interrupted here and there by patches of woodland, Crichton was a Bothwell family castle. Mary, Queen of Scots, attended the wedding here of Bothwell's sister, Lady Janet Hepburn, to Mary's brother, Lord John Stewart. The curious arcaded range reveals diamond rustication on the courtyard stonework; this particular geometric pattern is unique in Scotland and is thought to have been inspired by the Renaissance styles in Europe, particularly Italy. The oldest part of the structure is the 14th-century keep (square tower). Note that there are no toilets at the castle. ☎ Off B6367, Pathhead ☎ 01875/320017 🌐 www.historicenvironment.scot 💷 £6 🕒 Closed Oct.–Mar.

Dunbar

29 miles east of Edinburgh.

In the days before tour companies started offering package deals to the Mediterranean, Dunbar was a popular holiday beach resort. Now a bit faded, the town is still lovely for its spacious Georgian-style properties, characterized by the astragals, or fan-shaped windows, above the doors; the symmetry of the house fronts; and the parapeted rooflines. Though not the popular seaside playground it once was, Dunbar has an attractive beach and a picturesque harbor. It's also one end of the John Muir Way, a cross-Scotland hiking trail.

GETTING HERE AND AROUND

From Edinburgh head east on the A1 to get to Dunbar. You can also take a direct train from Edinburgh Waverley.

John Muir Country Park

NATIONAL/STATE PARK | Set on the estuary of the River Tyne, winding down from the Moorfoot Hills, the John Muir Country Park encompasses varied coastal scenery: rocky shoreline, golden sands, and the mixed woodlands of Tynninghame, teeming with wildlife. Dunbar-born conservationist John Muir (1838–1914), whose family moved to the United States when he was a child, helped found Yosemite and Sequoia national parks in California. ☎ Off A1087.

St. Mary's Parish Church

RELIGIOUS SITE | In the village of Whitekirk, on the road from Dunbar to North Berwick, lies the unmistakable St. Mary's Parish Church, with its beautiful red-sandstone Norman tower. Occupied since the 6th century, the church was a place of pilgrimage in medieval times because of its healing well. Behind the kirk, in a field, is a tithe barn—the tithe is the portion of a farmer's produce that was given to the local church. Beside this stands a 16th-century tower house, once used to accommodate visiting pilgrims. In the 15th century, the church was visited by a young Italian nobleman, Aeneas Sylvius Piccolomini, after he was shipwrecked off the East Lothian coast; two decades later, Piccolomini became Pope Pius II. ☎ A198, Whitekirk 🆓 Free.

GOLF

Dunbar Golf Club

GOLF | There's a lighthouse at the 9th hole of this seaside course, first laid out in 1856. It's a good choice for experiencing a typical east coast links, including the unique challenges presented by coastal winds. Within easy reach of Edinburgh, Dunbar Golf Club has stunning views of the Firth of Forth and Bass Rock. The club is currently undergoing an expansion that may see some changes to the course, as well as a new clubhouse and a hotel. Greens fees drop by nearly half in winter, when it's open midweek only. ☎ East Links, Golf House Rd. ☎ 01368/862317 🌐 www.dunbargolfclub.com 💷 £85 weekdays, £115 weekends 🏌️ 18 holes, 6597 yards, par 71 🐾 Reservations essential.

HIKING

John Muir Way

HIKING/WALKING | Completed in 2014, this much-praised scenic hiking path stretches from Helensburgh, northwest of Glasgow, to Dunbar. The trail's terminus is outside John Muir's birthplace, on the town's High Street. The 130-mile coast-to-coast route passes through some spectacular scenery (especially at the Helensburgh end). It takes about a week to traverse completely, but the official website has maps covering all the various sections. ☎ The John Muir Way (East End), 125 High St. 🌐 www.johnmuirway.org.

North Berwick

24 miles northeast of Edinburgh.

The pleasant little seaside resort of North Berwick manages to retain a small-town personality even when it's thronged with city visitors on warm summer days. Eating ice cream, the city folk stroll on the beach and in the narrow streets or gaze at the sailing craft in the small harbor. The town is near a number of castles and other sights.

GETTING HERE AND AROUND

Travel east on the A1 and A198, or take one of the regular trains from Edinburgh Waverley.

★ Isle of May

ISLAND | This small island in the middle of the Firth of Forth is home to many interesting sights, from the ruins of a medieval priory to a Gothic lighthouse to a wartime signal station. But it's the seabirds that really bring in the visitors. The Isle of May is the largest puffin colony on the east coast of Britain and is home to a quarter of a million birds nesting on the cliffs during late spring and early summer, as well as seals basking on the shore. To visit the island, you'll need to take a 12-seat RIB (rigid inflatable boat) across choppy waters, including a sail by Bass Rock—the world's largest colony of gannets. Tours start from the Scottish Seabird Centre and last four hours, including two hours on the island. ■ TIP → Book in advance online to avoid disappointment. ☎ North Berwick 🌐 www.seabird.org 🚗 Tour £48 🕒 Closed Oct.–Mar.

Scottish Seabird Centre

NATURE PRESERVE | FAMILY | An observation deck, exhibits, and films at this excellent family-friendly attraction provide a captivating introduction to the world of the gannets and puffins that nest on the Firth of Forth islands. Live interactive cameras let you take an even closer look at the bird colonies and marine mammals. Kids will enjoy the "Flyway Tunnel," a 3-D multimedia exhibit that simulates walking through an underwater passage, learning all about local nesting birds and sea life along the way. There are plenty of family-focused activities, nature walks, and photography shows, as well as a great on-site café and gift shop. ☎ The Harbour ☎ 01620/890202 🌐 www.seabird.org 🚗 £9.95.

★ Tantallon Castle

CASTLE/PALACE | Travel east along the flat fields from North Berwick, and the imposing silhouette of Tantallon Castle, a substantial, semiruin medieval fortress, comes dramatically into view. Standing on a headland with the sea on three sides, the red-sandstone walls are being chipped away by time and sea spray, with the earliest surviving stonework dating from the late 14th century.

The fortress was besieged in 1529 by the cannons of King James V and again (more damagingly) during the civil war of 1651. Despite significant damage, much of the curtain wall of this former Douglas stronghold survives and is now cared for by Historic Scotland. From the grounds you can see Bass Rock out to sea, which looks gray during winter but bright white in summer. Look through the telescope here and you'll see why. ☎ Off A198 ☎ 01620/892727 🌐 www.historicenvironment.scot 🚗 £6.

🍴 Restaurants

★ The Lobster Shack

$$ | SEAFOOD | North Berwick's most talked-about dining option isn't a traditional restaurant, or even a restaurant at all—it's a shack. That's testament to the sheer quality of the seafood served at this take-out stand, where freshly caught lobster (£19.95), sea bass, and haddock are cooked before your eyes and served in a box with double-dipped chips, ready to eat on a fold-up chair, a harbor wall, or while strolling along the beach. Known for: amazing lobster and chips; beautiful harborside location; good value. ☎ Average main: £10 ☎ North Berwick Harbour ☎ 07910/620480 🌐 www.lobstershack.co.uk 🕒 Closed Oct.–Mar.

🏠 Hotels

The Glebe House

$$$ | B&B/INN | This dignified 18th-century building was once a manse (minister's house), but is now a delightful and luxurious B&B. Pros: peaceful atmosphere; interesting antiques; sociable breakfast around a mahogany table. Cons: books up well in advance; too precious for some; expensive per-person rate for B&B. ☎ Rooms from: £150 ☎ Law Rd. ☎ 01620/892608 🌐 www.glebehouse-nb.co.uk 🚗 4 rooms 🍳 Breakfast.

Gullane

20 miles northeast of Edinburgh.

Follow the coastline on either side of Gullane and you're faced with golf course after golf course. Fairways are laid out wherever there is available links space along this stretch of East Lothian, with Muirfield just one of the courses here replete with players clad in expensive golfing sweaters. Apart from golf, visitors can enjoy restful summer-evening strolls along Gullane's sandy beach.

GETTING HERE AND AROUND

From Edinburgh, drive east on the A1, then head north along the coast on the A198. There are also two regular direct buses from the capital, run by East Coast Buses: 124 and X5.

👁 Sights

Dirleton Castle

CASTLE/PALACE | In the center of tiny Dirleton, 2 miles east of Gullane, sits the impressive-looking 12th-century Dirleton Castle. It's now a ruin, but its high outer wall is relatively complete, and the grounds behind the walls feature a 17th-century bowling green, set in the shade of yew trees and surrounded by a herbaceous flower border that blazes with color in high summer. King Edward I of England occupied the castle in 1298 as part of his campaign for the continued subjugation of the unruly Scots. ☎ Dirleton Ave., Off A198 ☎ 01620/850330 🌐 www.historicenvironment.scot 🚗 £6.

🍴 Restaurants

★ The Bonnie Badger

$$$ | BRITISH | A charming concoction of sandstone walls, rafted roofs, and roaring fireplaces, as well as a lovely garden area, this upmarket inn is the ideal spot for a pub lunch. Owned by star Edinburgh chef Tom Kitchin, the menu at first appears to be fairly by-the-numbers British pub fare—think fish-and-chips, steak pie, and sausage and mash—but with superior local produce and a dash of culinary imagination, classic dishes are transformed into something special. Known for: pigs' ears as a pre-meal snack; delicious desserts; beautiful garden. ☎ Average main: £17 ☎ Main St. ☎ 01620/621111 🌐 www.bonniebadger.com.

🚶 Activities

Gullane Golf Club

GOLF | Often overshadowed by Muirfield, Gullane provides an equally authentic links experience, as well as a far-more-ef-fusive welcome than its slightly snooty neighbor along the road. The three championship courses here crisscross Gullane Hill, and all command outstanding views of the Firth of Forth and particularly the beaches of Aberlady Bay. No. 1 is the toughest, but No. 2 and No. 3 offer up equally compelling sport and for significantly lower greens fees. Day tickets can also be purchased, and for No. 3 it's little more than the price of a single round. ☎ W. Links Rd. ☎ 01620/842255 🌐 www.gullanegolfclub.com 🚗 No. 1: £155 weekdays, £180 weekends; No. 2: £62 weekdays, £69 weekends; No. 3: £42 weekdays, £49 weekends 🏌 No. 1 Course: 18 holes, 6583 yards, par 71; No. 2 Course: 18 holes, 6385 yards, par 71; No. 3 Course: 18 holes, 5259 yards, par 68 🍷 Reservations essential.

Muirfield

GOLF | Home of the Honourable Company of Edinburgh Golfers and the world's oldest golfing club, Muirfield has a pedigree that few other courses can match. Although this course overlooking the Firth of Forth is considered one of golf's most challenging, players also talk about it being "fair," which means it has no hidden bunkers or sand traps. The club has a well-deserved reputation for being stuffy and traditional; you will be refused entry to the restaurant if you aren't wearing a jacket and tie. In addition, its first female members were only admitted in 2019, 275 years after it first opened (and this was only after threats of losing hosting rights to The Open). Visitors are permitted only on Tuesday and Thursday, and you must apply for a tee time well in advance. ✉ Duncur Rd. ☎ 01620/842123 🌐 www.muirfield.org.uk 📅 £270 Apr.–Oct., £110 Nov.–Mar. 🏌️ 18 holes, 7245 yards, par 71.

Haddington

18 miles east of Edinburgh.

One of the best-preserved medieval street plans in the country can be explored in Haddington. Among the many buildings of architectural and historical interest is the Town House, designed by William Adam in 1748 and enlarged in 1830. A wall plaque at the Sidegate recalls the great heights of floods from the River Tyne. Beyond is the medieval Nungate footbridge, with the Church of St. Mary a little way upstream.

GETTING HERE AND AROUND

From Edinburgh, simply drive east on the A1. Alternatively, take the bus: East Coast Buses 104 and X7, plus Borders Buses 253, will get you there.

Lennoxlove House

HOUSE | Majestic Lennoxlove House has been the grand ancestral home of the very grand dukes of Hamilton since 1947 and the Baird family before them. This turreted country house, with parts dating from the 15th century, is a cheerful mix of family life and Scottish history. The beautifully decorated rooms house portraits, furniture, porcelain, and items associated with Mary, Queen of Scots, including her supposed death mask. Sporting activities from falconry to fishing take place on the stunning grounds.

✉ Estate Office ☎ 01620/823720 📅 £10

🕒 Closed Nov.–Apr., Mon., Tues., Fri., and Sat.